The Five Mentoring Touchstones: How to build and maintain a successful mentoring partnership

- Finding your mentor
- Defining the mentoring relationship
- Clarifying your goals
- Taking charge of your growth
- Measuring mistakes and milestones

Anadri Chisolm-Noel is currently the Associate Director, HR Learning Services. Prior to joining Emory, she has worked for Citigroup, the City of Greensboro, NC and several universities including University of North Carolina-Greensboro (UNCG), Tufts University, M.I.T., and Wesleyan University.

In her role as the Associate Director, she coordinates several professional development programs on campus including Mentor Emory, the Administrative Professionals Program, the Supervisor Development Program, and the Manager Development Program. She is a certified trainer in the following: National MultiCultural Institute (NMCI), NCBI (National Coalition Building Institute), ASTD (American Society of Training & Development), Birkman, DiSC and MBTI. Anadri and her team assist leaders and their staff in creating collaborative work environments that capitalize on the diverse talent within Emory University.

She holds a Bachelor's Degree in Psychology (Connecticut College), a Masters of Education (Harvard University), and an Executive MBA (Emory Goizueta Business School). She resides in Atlanta with her husband, Terrence Noel, and extended family.
