Ways & Means Committee

Dear Lindbergh Chapter Members,

Spring will soon be here (thank goodness!). And with spring, we'll have many opportunities for taking dishes to a variety of potlucks, use Kleen Kanteen's during your fitness routine, etc. With the new calendar year, we need to gather 25 orders to submit another order in time for Mother's Day.

Ideally I would like to have all orders submitted by tax day in the hopes of having them back in plenty of time for Mother's Day gifts (and perhaps even in time for Easter gifts). Once we reach 25 orders (even if it's by Valentine's Day) our first order of the calendar year will be submitted (and everyone will be notified).

After that we only need to gather 8 orders each time we submit an order.

I wish you all the best with sales; That's My Pan items really do sell themselves fortunately between the quality and the appearance. Thanks for making this such a successful fund-raiser this year!

Linda Harr CPS/CAP

WAYS & MEANS COMMITTEE REPORT MICHE BAGS & SMALL INDULGENCES JEWELRY

Hello everyone... it's almost Spring and I can feel it in the air. I know all of you must be feeling like me and can't wait to get out of this winter drudgery and get on to the green grass, spring flowers, and warmer temps. Well, here's your chance to get out and have some fun. Lindbergh Chapter Ways & Means Committee will be sponsoring an Open House Miche Bag and Jewelry Party on Sunday, February 27th, from 2:00 – 4:00 p.m. at Mattingly's Sport Bar at 3434 Harry S. Truman Blvd., St. Charles, MO. 63301. It is located off of the Cave Springs/Truman Blvd. exit from Highway 70 or Highway 370. We will be in a private room next to the restaurant and I will have balloons on the door so you will be able to identify which door to enter.

We will have a drawing to win a base bag or shell of your choice. Come join the fun and see all of the new inventory that Miche has to offer and just how easy it is to own one and be able to switch out your purse in a matter of seconds without disturbing any of the inside contents of your purse! It's amazing and fun. We will also be showing our Small Indulgences Jewelry that we have on hand, so be thinking of your Spring and Summer wardrobes and what you will need to make your current wardrobe look brand new.

Hope you can join us at our Miche Bag Open House on Sunday, February 27th, between 2-4, at Mattingly's Sports Bar (Private Room located next to the restaurant). Be looking for those balloons tied to the door ... you won't be able to miss it!!! Hope to see you there!!!

Patti Barton, CPS
Ways & Means Chairman

Point of View

Boost Your Bargaining Power by Keeping Salary History Confidential

Many potential employers will want to know what you earned at your last job. Disclosing that information is not only irrelevant, it also severely diminishes your negotiating ability. Here are some suggestions about what to do when you're asked - including some alternatives to revealing information that is best left private.

At some point in the job-hunting process, you will be asked about your salary history. It may come up in an ad, during the initial screening or as you advance through the interview process. If you can, avoid answering directly. There are ways to deflect the question and it is in your best interest to keep your salary history private.

It's also likely you'll be asked about your salary requirement. Your salary requirement is the amount you'd accept to take the job. This question isn't your friend either. You never want to drop a number - either related to your salary history or requirement - before the potential employer tells you what they are prepared to pay.

If you disclose first, you have given up much of your negotiating power. If your current salary is low, for example, you may have trouble getting the new employer to budge past a certain percentage increase.

Focus on the present, not the past

Equally important, your salary history is not relevant to the discussion at hand. The right discussion is about the particular job, its value to the company and your skills. All of these things are tied to the job's fair market value. How can you help the new company be more successful and add to its bottom line? That's how a potential employer should assess your value. And that has nothing to do with your salary history.

So, what should you do when asked the salary history question? Say you believe that information is personal and confidential and you're not comfortable discussing it. Or perhaps you signed a contract and your salary is "company confidential." In either case, follow up with something along the lines of, "I've researched what comparable jobs pay and I'm confident we can reach an agreement on salary."

Decide on a salary range

Also, prior to applying or interviewing, decide on a range that spans the lowest salary you'd accept and your desired compensation. If you absolutely must reveal your salary, segue directly to your expectations and why you deserve the requested salary. Focus on your accomplishments and abilities. Be sure to thoroughly research the job and the market so you can speak with authority and conviction.

Then let the potential employer make the first offer. If you're asked what salary you want, counter politely with, "What is the salary range for the position?" When you get an offer, treat it as the starting point for negotiations on salary, benefits and perks.

Remember, your initial salary will have far-reaching implications. Subsequent raises are often a percentage increase over your current salary. In many cases, your company's contribution to your 401(K) is calculated as a percentage of salary. By knowing your own worth, mastering a few strategic skills and being savvy about market conditions, you can get the salary you deserve now and for the future. And you can only achieve that by looking forward, not back.

California Roll in a Bowl

Ever get stuck in a dinner rut? I sure do! Recently, while digging around in the 100-page homemade recipe file I keep on my computer, (I like to cook. Can you tell?) I found a salad I created about four years ago. Delicious and easy, it combines all of my favorite sushi ingredients in one bowl! And, because it's based on a California roll, it uses fully cooked seafood. This is a great way to introduce friends and family to the taste of sushi. Add slivered sushi ginger, bits of nori (seaweed), and sesame seeds to make it even more authentic.

10 Minutes to Prepare and Cook

Ingredients

Salad:

1 cup brown rice, cooked (1/2 c dry)
 1 head butter or romaine lettuce, chopped
 8 oz. imitation crab meat or cooked shrimp, chopped
 1 English (seedless) cucumber, peeled, thinly sliced
 1 ripe avocado, diced
 1 carrot, grated
 3 T pickled ginger, chopped

Dressing:

3 T rice wine vinegar
 1 T light soy sauce
 Wasabi powder to taste (start with 1/2 t)

Garnishes:

1 T sesame seeds
 1 large sheet nori (seaweed), toasted and broken into small pieces

Directions

Combine all ingredients for dressing in a small bowl and whisk ingredients together.

Divide clean, dry and chopped lettuce among four large bowls. Top with crab meat, avocado, cucumber, carrot and ginger. Drizzle dressing over salads, then top with sesame seeds and nori.
