DERIVATIVE LAWSUITS

Shareholder derivative suit: action brought by a corporate shareholder on behalf of the corporation to enforce a corporate right that the officers and directors of the corporation have failed to enforce.

Shareholder must claim (1) that corporation was harmed; (2) that D&Os failed to take action to remedy harm; (3) shareholders must take action in place of D&Os.

Threshold: before suit, shareholder must make a "demand" on Board clearly identifying alleged wrong and demanding the corporation take action to remedy it, or that it would be futile to do so.

Shareholder must overcome the business judgment rule - a presumption that in making a business decision, the directors acted on an informed basis, in good faith and in the honest belief that the action taken was in the best interests of the company.

Home Depot (Bennek v. Ackerman et al)

Audit committee received regular reports from management on the state of Home Depot's cybersecurity – regular system of reporting

Board approved a plan to remedy PCI-DSS and other security weaknesses.

"There is no question that the Board was fulfilling its duty of loyalty to ensure that a reasonable system of reporting existed." The Board also approved a plan to fix known security weaknesses; "with the benefit of hindsight, one can safely say that the implementation of the plan was probably too slow," but the directors' decision-making must be "reasonable not perfect."
