Organizers:

Yoo Sang Choo, Centre for Offshore Research & Engineering (CORE),
National University of Singapore

David N. Edelson, Technip USA, Houston, U.S.A.

Trevor Mills, McDermott International, Houston, U.S.A.

CORE in National University of Singapore is organizing the second Marine Operations Specialty Symposium. The need for continuing the symposium is demonstrated by the variety of shallow and deepwater operations and facility installation activities worldwide from offshore oil & gas and renewable industries, universities and research institutes.

In general this symposium will cover all aspects offshore operation and installation related issues. These issues will be of interest to many segments of offshore oil & gas and renewables (wind, current, wave, OTEC). Typical topics include:

- Subsea Operations & Interventions
- Float-over Operations
- Installation of Wind, Current, Wave and Thermal Systems
- Installation of Environmental Monitoring Devices
- Installation Vessels
- Simulators for Marine Operations
- Decommissioning and Abandonment
- Pipeline Installations

We are seeking a broad cross section of papers from universities, research organizations, regulatory bodies, operators, installation contractors, service companies, and consultants that highlight the latest technologies and developments. High quality abstracts that demonstrate to the reader that your paper and presentation will be interesting, informative and topical are most welcomed.
