

Author Guidelines

Behavioral Disorders (BD) is published four times each year by the Council for Children with Behavioral Disorders, a Division of the Council for Exceptional Children. Papers published in this journal are reports of original investigations and theoretical papers that relate to the education of students with emotional and behavioral disorders. Publication policy is established by the Council's Publications Committee. Published articles may use within-or between-subject designs. Both quantitative and qualitative studies are considered appropriate, although to date most submissions have been quantitative in nature. Research, program evaluation reports, and position papers should be assessed for their social significance. Socially significant experimental investigations may be basic or applied in nature, although BD has a tradition of publishing applied research, especially studies related to assessment of and intervention with children and youth with emotional and behavioral disorders. Teacher educators, teachers, psychologists, administrators, and researchers with an interest in emotional and behavioral disorders constitute the majority of BD subscribers. Theoretical or translation of research, practice, or policy in the form of a "position" statement will be considered for the Forum section of the journal. In addition, we will accept Brief reports of research that will allow new researchers (e.g., junior faculty, graduate students) to submit studies (e.g., pilot studies) that possess particular interest to the field but may lack the methodological rigor (e.g., small sample size) to meet the standard of a regular research article.

Manuscripts must follow the format specified by the 6th edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. Manuscripts should be electronically produced using word processing software using double spacing (including quotations and references) and formatted to the standard 8 1/2- by 11-inch paper with 1 inch margins. Titles should not exceed 15 words. An abstract of no more than 200 words should be printed on the page following the title page. Manuscripts of 15 to 25 pages in length, including references and tables or figures, are most suitable for publication. Brief reports should be 15–20 pages in length, including references (not to exceed 15) and tables and figures, and should combine the Results and Discussion section. Accuracy and completeness of all references and permission to use copyrighted material, if required, is the responsibility of the author. The Editors should be informed of changes in address occurring during the review process.

Manuscripts received are screened for appropriateness of topic and quality before being sent out for review. Typically, manuscripts are reviewed by at least three Consulting Editors who make recommendations to an Associate Editor who then make recommendations to the Editors. Final decisions concerning publication are made by the Editors. The review process requires a minimum of three months. During the review process inquiries may be addressed to the Editors via the website. The Editors reserve the right to make changes in the wording that do not change the meaning of the text. Initial submissions and final versions of accepted manuscripts should be submitted as electronic files at <http://behavioraldisorders.alltrack2.net>. No charge is made for setup of standard-width tables. Copies of figures and charts should be included in the electronic text document or sent as a separate electronic file.

To protect the rights of authors and the Council for Children with Behavioral Disorders publications, all material published in Behavioral Disorders is copyrighted. The author(s) of manuscripts accepted for publication will be required to sign an agreement transferring copyright ownership to the Council for Children with Behavioral Disorders. The granting of rights and permission regarding the use of copyrighted material is handled by the Editors following policies developed by the Publications Committee. Concerns, questions, or suggestions may be directed to the Editors or members of the Publications Committee whose names are printed on the inside back cover of BD.