

More Positive Outcomes by Balancing Opportunities and Threats

All people, not just project managers, are hard-wired to focus on threats, the negative risks, when asked to identify risks. Focusing on threats is important. However, the typical response strategy is to avoid them. If successful, nothing happens. Good yes, but memorable, no. By balancing opportunities and threats, more positive things will happen making the project more successful and memorable.

After 42 years of project and program management roles at the Savannah River Site, Roger is now a full-time professor at Augusta University in Augusta Georgia. He teaches project management in their business school, as well as holding traditional and agile workshops for certifications. Roger graduated from Auburn University in 1977 and the University of South Carolina in 1979 with degrees in mechanical engineering.

*Roger Duke,
PMP, ACP, CSM*

THURSDAY, April 17, 6 PM

- 6 PM Networking In Person and Online
- 6:30 PM Presentation

UPCOMING EVENTS:

May 8, 2025—Dexter Justis, Region I Director of Project Management from Tennessee Department of Transportation

Each person in attendance is eligible to receive 0.25 CEU or 2 PDU AACE-I Section Meeting Credit.

HYBRID MEETING FORMAT:

*Registration is required:
Click here to Register.*

After completing the registration form, the system will automatically email the meeting Zoom link.

In-person Meeting:

North Augusta Church
600 W Martintown Rd
North Augusta, SC 29841