The Council for the Advancement of Nursing Science is pleased to present the 2018 State of the Science (SOS) Congress on Nursing Research on precision health, a biennial research dissemination conference where nurse researchers from around the world join with recognized scientific experts, funding agencies, and policy makers, to explore emerging scientific discoveries, and to engage in this dialogue which is critical to our profession and to our society.

The 2018 SOS Congress on Nursing Research will increase participants’ knowledge of precision health and implications for nursing science. Precision health has been at the forefront of national and international emphasis because of its impact on health promotion and illness prevention.
