

ARGYROS POSTDOCTORAL FELLOWSHIP IN ONCOLOGY NURSING RESEARCH

The Argyros Postdoctoral Fellowship in Oncology Nursing Research at The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center provides nurses who completed a doctoral degree (Ph.D.) with an exceptional opportunity to further develop a research career in oncology. The intent of the program is to foster research that will advance oncology nursing science and clinical practice, shape health policy, and improve outcomes of patients across the cancer continuum.

Postdoctoral fellows will receive advanced training and mentorship in patient-centered research as part of an interdisciplinary team, develop grant writing, publication and communication skills, and build their professional network. This is a one-year appointment, renewable for a second year, with a competitive stipend and benefits. The fellowship is supported through a generous endowment by the Argyros Family Foundation.

In addition, fellows will complete course work in research methods and their area of focus, as well as participate in department and institutional learning opportunities. Examples of courses include epidemiology, bioinformatics, health sciences and biobehavioral research. Fellows will participate in workshops, scientific presentations, scientific writing, grant preparation and career development.

Qualified candidates are preferred to have a Ph.D. in nursing or a related field from an accredited university. If the graduate degree is not in nursing, a master's level degree in nursing is required.

All candidates must be licensed or eligible for licensure as an RN in the state of Texas and preferably have at least two years of experience as a clinical or advanced practice nurse (negotiable). Writing skills are important.
