

Dominican University Executive Director of Nursing

Academic Career & Executive Search is pleased to assist Dominican University in its search for Executive Director of Nursing.

For full consideration, please apply by March 21st

This is an exceptional opportunity to join Dominican University, a Catholic and Dominican Hispanic Serving Institution, as the Executive Director of Nursing to lead and shape the next generation of compassionate and skilled health care professionals. Reporting to the Dean of the Borra College of Health Sciences, the Executive Director of Nursing (ED) will be responsible for providing academic leadership by setting the standards of intellectual engagement and accomplishment for the Elizabeth T. MacNeil School of Nursing, including leading and inspiring a team of dedicated faculty in achieving excellence.

The Borra College of Health Sciences strives to be a national leader in advancing health care education through interprofessional collaborations and civic engagement and takes a relationship-centered approach to nursing education. With small class sizes, students work collaboratively and build close partnerships with faculty and colleagues. In keeping with Dominican's mission, the nursing program provides a foundation for professional practice that respects the dignity of each and every person, pursuit of the common good, and concern for those most vulnerable. The University's curricula, research and campus life demonstrate a commitment to ethics, community service, social justice and global citizenship. The next ED will support this strategic mission to prepare DU students in health care professions through nationally recognized programs that are rigorous, relevant, and empowered by Carias et Veritas (Love and Truth).

The School of Nursing is CCNE accredited (2021) and offers BSN and RN-BSN programs. The School offers two state-of-the-art high-tech simulation labs and over 30 secured clinical affiliation agreements.

Dominican has been recognized as a Hispanic-Serving Institution (HSI) by the Department of Education since 2011, and since receiving the Midwest's only Title V grant in 2017. Dominican has secured over $15 million in funding from various Title V, Title III-STEM, NSF and HRSA grant competitions.

This position reports to the Dean of the Borra College of Health Sciences and leads the Elizabeth T. MacNeil School of Nursing.
