

Gloria J. McNeal, PhD, MSN, ACNS-BC, FAAN

Gloria J. McNeal, PhD, MSN, ACNS-BC, FAAN was recently named a Well-Being Champion by the AARP Public Policy Institute. Dr. McNeal was selected as part of an elite group of 10 leaders who are cultivating a culture of health in the transformation of their respective communities. Her current work focuses on improving access to care for residents of the underserved communities of Watts, Inglewood and Compton in Los Angeles County. She serves as Project Director of the National University Nurse Managed Clinic, which is a HRSA-funded virtual nurse-led project that has delivered primary care services to over 600 patients in its three years of operation. Students and faculty in eight different disciplines participate in this interprofessional collaborative practice model. Telehealth technologies are used by the clinical team to monitor biometric data remotely.
