The Pursuit of Hope and Dignity: Why Clinical Trials Matter to Patients

Date:	May 30, 2013
Speaker:	Charles Sabine - Emmy Award-Winning TV Journalist
Location:	Baltimore VA Medical Center 10 N. Greene Street, Room 2A Conference Room (2A-104) (Free Parking in VA Garage – enter on Fayette Street side)
Program Description	In this replay of the 2013 ACRP Global Conference Plenary Session, Mr. Sabine addresses the importance to patient and their families of clinical trials and the need for researchers to realize how even unsuccessful research is of value because in a world of total darkness the very faintest glimmer of light emboldens the human spirit to go on. Mr. Sabine talks of his belief that the future of healthcare and research must involve greater collaboration between all key protagonists: researchers, governments, pharmaceutical companies, and patients and their families. Mr. Sabine explains why every aspect of research, however far it may seem to be removed from the patient, is part of a greater good of aspiring to care for the infirm-what Charles Darwin Called “the noblest part of our nature.” This presentation draws on the lessons of Mr. Sabine’s travels with NBC and the stark reality of battling with one of the most devastating illnesses known to man.
