Building Bridges Across the World

Presidents Welcome

Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of the board of directors, I am delighted to welcome you to the 2016 International Conference on Eating Disorders in San Francisco. Our theme this year, "Building Bridges Across the World," highlights not just the global nature of our conference, but also that of our field as well as the Academy of Eating Disorders as an organization. As you will see, the conference theme really does describe many of the presentations in this year's program.

I trust in your ability to read through the program, so I am going to simply note a number of highlights to whet your appetite for all of the wonderful experiences that await all of us over the next few days. First, Meaghan Ramsey, Partner, Brunswick Group, London, UK and Former Global Director for the Dove Self Esteem Project, will deliver our keynote and propose that businesses have a role to play in advancing health-related agendas on a global scale. Meaghan is a wonderful speaker and without a doubt has many insights to offer.

As always, plenaries provide the backbone of our conference. This year, you can expect the following:

- Our first ever Spanish-speaking plenary addressing "The Impact of Westernization on Illness Presentation, Prevention, and Treatment of Eating Disorders in Latin America." Now, in case you are panicking at the notion of such an interesting plenary being delivered in a language you do not speak – have no fear. We will be providing simultaneous translation into English. If you have not experienced this, let me assure you that it works wonderfully. This is the first time ICED has showcased a plenary in a non-English language, so please join us for this historic event. I know we will all learn a tremendous amount from our speakers.
- Our second plenary investigates "The Brave New World of Integrating Knowledge and Practice Regarding Eating Disorders Biology and Prevention." Our program committee has lined up speakers from both within and outside the eating disorders world, and I suspect this plenary will produce some lively debate during the discussion portion.
- The third plenary "East Meets West: Integrating Culture in the Dissemination and Delivery of Eating Disorders Treatment" returns to our global theme by using Asia as an illustrative anchor for exploring numerous factors that influence the development and global dissemination of evidence-based interventions for eating disorders. This plenary will serve as our "treatment plenary" this year, always a highlight at our conference.

- Last but not least, this year we will directly explore issues related to social justice in our final plenary "Diversity and Stigma through the Social Justice Lens in the Prevention, Research and Treatment of Eating Disorders." Social justice has been a significant topic in the eating disorders field over the past year, so I strongly encourage you to fight the urge to explore San Francisco and instead attend this important discussion.

While plenaries provide an anchor to our conference, many other components are also invaluable learning experiences – even those that appear to be breaks (we do like to keep you occupied). These include (but are not limited to):

- Special Interest Group meetings and interactive panels
- A diverse array of 33 workshops. Good luck figuring out which 3 you want to attend
- The pre-conference teaching day which provides additional opportunities to explore specific topics in depth
- The end of the conference Research Practice Think-Tank
- Numerous scientific papers and posters to bring you up to date on the latest research in the field. Again, I wish you luck in deciding what to see
- Meet the Experts greet time for non-members to become better acquainted with the AED
- Our meet the experts event, which provides roundtable opportunities to talk with experts in specific areas
- Reception and refreshment breaks, which provide great opportunities for networking and catching up with old friends. You also can usually find plenty of chocolate and pens if you make your way to the exhibitors
- And last but not least, the closing social event including plenty of dancing

Before I end, I wanted to extend my sincerest thanks to conference co-chairs Jenny Lundgren and Marisol Perez as well as the entire scientific program committee.

And now, I wish you a most enjoyable conference. Take advantage of this outstanding program, enjoy your colleagues, and explore this beautiful city. Above all, learn and have a great time doing so. We are so glad you are here with us.

Untapped Potential: Could Working with Business Offer the Elusive Key to Unlocking Body Image and Eating Disorders Prevention on a Global Scale?

Meaghan E. Ramsey, B.Sc (Nutr. & Diet.), UK & Australia

To date, brands and businesses have typically been part of the problem. Found guilty of promoting unrealistic beauty ideals and narrow stereotypes, they can perpetuate negative body image and contribute to its spread around the world. But what if the might of global business, its operations and its advertising, could form part of the solution? What if, instead, it could be harnessed to promote positive body image? What difference would it make if businesses disseminated effective body confidence-building interventions? What if businesses invested in pioneering research and developing new approaches to understand negative body image and how best to address it? And what if this was on a global scale?

In our increasingly volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous world, businesses can and will play an important role in addressing some of the biggest challenges facing humanity, including public health. Specifically, businesses can be supported to become effective partners in the promotion of positive body image and the prevention of eating disorders.

Ramsey will share insights from her time leading the Dove Self-Esteem Project, now the largest provider of evidence-based body confidence education in the world. Offering practical strategies to collaborate with businesses, she will shine light on the processes, advantages and challenges of leveraging business to support and deliver body image and eating disorder advocacy and prevention programs, and measure their impact at scale. By sharing knowledge, expertise and resources across sectors, innovative approaches to understand and address appearance-related anxieties globally could be unlocked to overcome negative body image for the next generation.

Continuing Education

Meeting Objectives

As a result of this meeting, participants will be able to:

- Describe how building bridges with business can assist the eating disorder community in disseminating its knowledge and science including the barriers, risks, and benefits of forming these partnerships.
- Discuss how the societal changes that are occurring in developing countries impact the risk factors, prevalence, and treatment of eating disorders.
- Critically evaluate how biology and prevention can build a symbiotic relationship that can advance our knowledge of risk factors and improve eating disorders prevention efforts.
- Describe the influence of diverse cultures on the symptom expression, assessment, prevention, and treatment of eating disorders
- Critically evaluate the impact of diversity representation and stigma within the eating disorders community on social justice

Educational Need

The goal of the conference is to assist in closing the gap between research evidence and clinical practice, by informing clinicians about recent evidence and informing researchers about clinical innovations that could lead to enhanced research in the field. In particular, issues of clinical-research interface will be addressed in the sociocultural, treatment and biological domains. Many clinicians are unaware of the breadth and depth of the recent literature in this field. Consequently, the clinicians who attend this meeting will receive the necessary updates to enable them to improve their knowledge and practice in a wide range of areas of practice with this clinical population.

Recovery is possible.

The Eating Disorders program at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital Dallas recently opened a new inpatient unit where we address the biological, psychological and social forces facing our patients. The only adult inpatient unit devoted to eating disorders in Texas, we offer programming at four levels of care for both men and women, designed to guide them to successful recoveries and lasting solutions.
