The Academy of Architecture for Justice (AAJ) promotes excellence in the design of justice facilities. AAJ members have expertise in the planning, design, and construction of justice facilities, including judicial complexes, courthouses, police stations, prisons, jails, special needs facilities, and juvenile detention centers.

AAJ members encourage development of designs that result in facilities that:

- Operate efficiently, safely, and securely;
- Contribute to more livable, more sustainable communities;
- Elevate the stature of these “institutions” within society;
- Create a positive environment for those who visit, work, and live in these facilities;
- Achieve responsible stewardship of public funds.

The AAJ fosters the exchange of knowledge between members, professional organizations, and the public regarding high-quality planning, design, and delivery of justice architecture. Architect members work in private and public organizations of all sizes, and many are expert in subjects ranging from courtroom technology and advanced security systems to specific design requirements for juvenile detention centers. Allied AAJ members are from all sectors of the justice community who work in partnership with architects. They include educators, public servants, administrators, contractors, product manufacturers, and consultants.

Together, architect and allied AAJ members are committed to improving justice systems through excellent justice facility design. The AAJ welcomes sponsors who share the value of achieving quality design in this sector of the construction industry.
