Innovating for the Future
The Overlooked Legacy of Enterprise in Bronzeville, Chicago

---------- DR. LEON PRIETO, MH DIVISION CHAIR

As I prepare to stand once again in the bustling city of Chicago for the Academy of Management Annual Meeting, I am reminded of the indomitable spirit of innovation that courses through this city’s veins. The theme for this year’s conference, “Innovating for the Future,” couldn’t be more apt, especially when reflecting on the rich history of enterprise in one of Chicago’s most storied neighborhoods, Bronzeville. This vibrant community is a testament to the resilience and ingenuity of Black Chicagoans, whose contributions to the city’s economic and cultural fabric have been profoundly impactful yet often overlooked.

Chicago’s history of enterprise is incomplete without acknowledging Jean Baptiste Point du Sable, a Haitian of African descent, who founded the city in the late 18th century. Point du Sable’s trading post at the mouth of the Chicago River laid the groundwork for the bustling metropolis we see today. His role as a pioneer is a powerful reminder that the roots of Chicago’s success are deeply

Revised Domain Statement

The Management History Division welcomes scholars from across the globe to become part of our inclusive and dynamic community, committed to the interdisciplinary study of management and organizational history.

Our focus encompasses the emergence and evolution of management practices, examining the roles of managers, entrepreneurs, and organizations in shaping historical continuity and change.

With a keen interest in the study of the past of management and organizing, our division flourishes through a rich diversity of ideas, philosophies, theories, and methodologies.

This nurturing and collaborative space fosters the confluence of history, time, and memory, deepening our comprehension of both management theory and practice.
intertwined with the contributions of African Americans.

Moving forward in time, Bronzeville emerged as a beacon of Black entrepreneurship and cultural flourishing during the early 20th century. This neighborhood became a hub of economic activity and cultural renaissance, driven by the innovative efforts of visionary entrepreneurs.

Among them was Anthony Overton, whose business empire included the Overton Hygienic Company, the first major Black-owned cosmetics company. Overton’s enterprises not only provided employment for the Black community but also instilled a sense of pride and empowerment among African Americans.

Jesse Binga, another titan of Bronzeville’s entrepreneurial landscape, founded the Binga State Bank, which was the first Black-owned bank in Chicago. Binga’s bank offered financial services to the Black community at a time when mainstream banks denied them access. His efforts in real estate and banking helped many Black families secure homes and build wealth, laying a foundation for economic stability in the community.

John H. Johnson, the founder of Johnson Publishing Company, further cemented Bronzeville’s status as a center of Black enterprise. Johnson’s publications, including Ebony and Jet magazines, celebrated Black culture and achievements, providing a platform for Black voices and fostering a sense of unity and pride within the community.

Research by Business historians such as Robert Weems and Juliet E. K. Walker has been instrumental in shedding light on these important contributions. Weems highlights how Black businesses in Bronzeville played a crucial role in community development and economic empowerment. Walker’s comprehensive studies underscore the entrepreneurial spirit that thrived in Black communities despite the systemic challenges they faced.

Despite these significant contributions, the narrative of Chicago’s development often overlooks the essential roles played by its Black citizens. The labor and ingenuity of Black Chicagoans were not just ancillary but central to the city’s growth. As we discuss “Innovating for the Future” at this conference, it is vital to remember and honor these historical contributions.

Bruna Brito

Bruna Brito is a PhD student at the Gustavson School of Business at the University of Victoria. She studies how alternative forms of organizing leverage collective memories of the past to foster community resilience and social change.

Bruna’s dissertation research focuses on the history of community organizations involved in the Brazilian Carnival. Afro-Brazilian groups have faced marginalization and criminalization of their cultural practices and were pushed to live in poor communities on the outskirts of large metropoles in Brazil, in favelas or slums. Despite these adverse institutional conditions, they have transformed Carnival into a national symbol that positions African-Brazilian culture and an ode to the Brazilian melting pot myth.

Division Accomplishments

---- Dr. Leon Prieto

We’ve been quite busy this past year. There were good times, passionate opinions, and the occasional scattered showers, but we came together for the good of the division and accomplished quite a bit.

Here are just a few highlights:

• Approved MH Revised Domain Statement (first time since 2001):
  Introduced Webinar Series Aligned with Domain Statement:

  Inclusive Narratives of Management History (Limited Series): With over 1,100 views/attendees, this series was a hit, and may result in new members from across the globe.

• Unveiled a New Logo:
  A fresh new look for our division!

• Updated Website:
  Please take a moment to visit our updated website which includes information on past leadership, current officers, newsletters, in memorium, etc.: https://mh.aom.org/home

• Introduced New Division Awards:
  • Emerging Scholars Award: Celebrating the rising stars in our field.
  • Daniel Wren Award: Honoring exceptional contributions to management history.
  • Diverse Voices Award: Recognizing the importance of diversity in our narratives.

It’s been a year of growth, collaboration, and innovation. Here’s to more exciting achievements in the year to come!

PROGRAM CHAIR REPORT

We have 7 paper sessions featuring 28 accepted papers, offering a diverse exploration of management history.

The Plenary Session, scheduled for Sunday, August 11th, from 10:00 AM, features a distinguished panel discussing the co-evolution of history in organizations, this session, led by Matteo Cristofaro and moderated by Jeffrey Muldoon, brings together renowned experts, including Bradley Bowden, Marcelo Bucheli, Geoffrey Jones, and Arie Y. Lewin. Their insights into the co-evolution of history in organizations promise to inspire and challenge our perspectives.

During our Business Meeting, scheduled for Monday, August 12th, from 4:30 PM, we will not only reflect on past achievements and chart the course for our future endeavors but also have the honor of delivering awards to distinguished papers and scholars who have contributed significantly to the programme and the development of management history.

Following our sessions, join us for the Social Event on Monday, August 12th, from 6:30 PM. Enjoy live music and delectable cuisine while connecting with fellow members. We eagerly anticipate your participation in this annual meeting!

BY MATTEO CRISTOFARO

Dear Management History Division Members,

We are excited to present the program for the upcoming 83rd Academy of Management meeting in Chicago this August. This year’s lineup promises a rich exploration of management history, offering valuable insights and fostering engaging discussions among scholars and practitioners alike.

PDW CHAIR REPORT

By Diego Coraiola

This year we had 12 quality submissions for PDWs at the Management History Division and were able to select 9 to be hosted at the AOM in Chicago. There will be a rich variety of options for our members. PhD students and early career scholars may be particularly interested in joining the PDW on “Navigating the New Publishing Game: Challenges and Opportunities in Mobilizing History in Management”. Colleagues looking for theoretical and methodological guidance will find some advice on PDWs such as “Developing Theory From Historical Research” and “Empirical & Methodological Examinations of the Past in Family Business & Entrepreneurship Research”. We have also been fortunate to receive several submissions addressing important social topics that promise to enrich the discussions in the field. One PDW looks at “Inclusive Narratives of Management History” and another focuses on “Researching Legacies of Colonialism in Management and Organization Studies”. In addition to those, we are also co-sponsoring other 7 PDWs with other divisions on topics such as critical case studies, temporality and technology, and historical injustices that we hope will be of interest to our members.

In Memoriam

Julia Teahen volunteered to be Editor of the Management History Division newsletter, Historically Speaking, when Michele and Paul Govekar stepped down from the position in 2010. As with all tasks Julia took on, she excelled in her role; she produced issues of Historically Speaking that built community, informed MHD members, and enticed readers with exciting visual images, both historic and current, of annual meeting venues.

Julia passed away unexpectedly in 2020. More about Julia can be found at https://mh.aom.org/about-us/memoriam

Our new issue of Historically Speaking is dedicated to her memory.
