Daniel Volshteyn

Daniel Volshteyn is a Class of 2024 Master of Healthcare Administration (MHA) candidate at the Cornell University Sloan Program. Daniel completed his Bachelor's at Cornell University where he studied Human Biology, Health, and Society and graduated Summa Cum Laude. After graduation, Daniel will be joining ChenMed as a Leadership Fellow. He hopes to incorporate technology to enhance patient health and drive operational/quality improvements in clinical settings.

Daniel's healthcare management experience includes acting as an administrative intern at Massachusetts General Hospital, a BioEntrepreneurship fellow at Cornell, and a Board Member for ACHE Upstate NY. He is also a host of The Health Conscious Podcast. Daniel's prior positions include acting as an associate in a clinical accelerator, a president for a volunteer-based healthcare non-profit, and a consultant for a non-profit organizing health clinics in Uganda. Clinically, Daniel has been a medical assistant in a veteran's hospital in Ukraine and has worked as a surgical intern at New York Presbyterian Hospital. In his free time, Daniel enjoys staying active hiking, skiing, or weightlifting.
