

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People and Psychology (ATSIPP) Interest Group Student Conference Attendance Award

The award is to provide Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander psychology students with a positive experience of the psychology profession through a conference format.

The award will also provide an opportunity to network and liaise with other psychology students and/or psychologists from the Australian Psychological Society (APS), and/or the Australian Indigenous Psychologists Association (AIPA) members particularly Aboriginal and or Torres Strait Islander Psychologists, in attendance at the conference.

The aim of this Award is to assist with building relationships, skill development and to contribute toward increasing the number of Indigenous Psychologists in Australia.

The award is to be used in 2026 toward an APS or AIPA conference. The AIPA conference on offer is the suicide prevention conference in March 2026 in Adelaide (National Indigenous Mental Health and Suicide Prevention Conference | Aventedge) and APS conferences can be found on (APS Conferences & Events | APS).

Full details of the award and how to apply can be found here ATSIPP Indigenous Student Conference Attendance Award | APS. Please nominate your conference preference within the application.

Closing date to apply for the award this year is the 16th November 2025
