

Randi Tolber, CFA, serves as Managing Director of Member and Society Relations at CFA Institute. In this global leadership role, she is responsible for delivering value to more than 200,000 members and charterholders worldwide, guiding the Institute's partnerships with CFA Societies in over 90 markets, and advancing volunteer engagement across the CFA Institute community.

Randi leads a global team focused on strengthening the connection between CFA Institute and its members, supporting the professional growth of investment practitioners, and ensuring a consistent and high-quality member experience.

Prior to joining CFA Institute in 2012, Randi spent 15 years in the private wealth management sector, serving as a senior portfolio manager and investment strategist at two U.S.-based banks. She holds a master's in business administration, as well as the CFA Institute Certificate in Climate, Risk, Valuation and Investing and a certification in public company governance from the U.S. based National Association of Corporate Directors. She previously served on the boards of two US based CFA societies. Today regularly advises societies around the world on non-profit governance and strategy best practices, with the aim of advancing the CFA Institute mission and values to our stakeholders around the world.
