CFA Society Luxembourg

Newsletter – September 2016

A word from the Board:

After a nice summer break, the Board reconvened to map strategy for the second half of the calendar year. Several topics and event ideas were discussed and will be considered going forward. One topic given some focus was the importance of local societies and their role in the development of individuals and our profession. This followed meetings in late June in Charlottesville, Virginia, USA, where several Board members of CFA Society Luxembourg had a chance to hear the views of Paul Smith, CFA, the President of CFA Institute, on why local societies are so important and must become even more pivotal to promote and develop our organisation and our profession. Part of his strategy is to empower local societies to become more integrated and active with local communities. This should raise awareness and ultimately raise the standard of the investment profession. This could range from the organisation working to gain more visibility with employers and regulators to individuals acting as ambassadors at their workplace. So stay alert for ways to get more involved and feel free to share ideas with us.
