

We are hiring!

InvestKaar Advisory

Investment Analyst

Most CVs I get are impressive on paper.

MBA.

CFA Level 1/2/3.

Internships at three banks.

And then I ask: "Tell me about a company you've analyzed on your own." Silence.

It's not your fault. You worked somewhere too big. Too many layers. By the time your idea reached anyone, it was already someone else's report.

See, when I started, I joined a small but extremely fast-growing brokerage. That place made me who I am. We had no choice but to think deeper than our peers — and we were allowed to.

Actually pushed to. No permission slips. You like a stock? Go deep. You think it shouldn't be in the strategy? Compel us with reasons. That's the environment we're building at InvestKaar Advisory. We need one person.

Not the best CV in the room - the most passionate one.

Someone obsessed with markets, sectors, business models, valuations. Someone who reads an annual report on a weekend because they wanted to know.

Minimum 1 year in real investment analysis.

Street smart. Figures things out on his own.

In return - a competitive package, the best team to work with, and something most analysts never get: you'll see portfolio construction up close.

Which stocks, what weight, when to add, when to cut. And eventually, you'll do it yourself.

You won't spend your days writing reports. InvestKaar Advisory doesn't work that way.

You'll do the analysis - and if you have it in you, you'll present your ideas directly to our advisory members and general public on the InvestKaar channel.

Your name. Your conviction. Your call. Send your CV to hr@investkaar.com - we want to close this as soon as we find the right person. Include one company you've analyzed and why you'd buy or avoid it today. No essays. Just conviction and numbers. That last part is NOT optional.