

Jane Wells

Jane Wells is an award-winning broadcast journalist who spent more than 40 years in the news media — much of that time at CNBC — before she retired from television in 2024. She's covered everything from earthquakes to riots, from the O.J. Simpson murder case to Mother Teresa's funeral, from the massacre at Columbine to the 2008 financial collapse. She's questioned CEOs about poor business decisions, posed as a prostitute for a story on AIDS, and appeared in the "Seinfeld" finale. Jane continues to moderate finance-related events...when she's not snorkeling on the Big Island. She's still trying to learn how to cook.
