

Tim Markham's Bio

Tim Markham began his career working at Janus Capital Group in 1993 as a senior buyer in the Supply Management group. Building on his success in that role, he moved up to director of internal consulting in the Finance department where he led corporate wide initiatives, reviewed internal controls and processes, and provided leadership for the SAP application. In 2001, Markham became Vice President of Corporate Services, where he was responsible for global real estate and facilities, supply management, corporate travel and expense management, and the Project Management Office.

After leaving Janus at the end of 2008, Markham began working for Matrix Design Group in 2009 as an alternative energy consultant. His work focused on providing industry analysis identifying market size, anticipated market growth, existing competitors, and future business opportunities within the alternative energy industry. In 2010, Markham started his own company, Workplace Transitions LLC, where he provided consulting and project management services to small businesses needing help with their real estate, facilities and general business services.

Today Markham serves as senior director of workplace resources and corporate travel for IHS Inc., a public company based in Englewood, Colorado. His responsibilities cover real estate, facilities and travel functions. He is also heavily involved in M&A due diligence/integration, disaster recovery, and physical security. The IHS real estate portfolio includes 125 offices in 30 countries, supporting over 5,000 employees.

Markham graduated in 1992 from the College of Business at Colorado State University with a bachelor's degree in business management and in 1996 from the University of Colorado at Denver with an M.B.A. Markham holds a CRM (Certified Real Estate Manager) and a C.P.M. (Certified Purchasing Manager), both professional certifications through CoreNet Global and the Institute of Supply Management respectively. In his spare time he enjoys golf, skiing, mountain biking, and spending time with his wife and three daughters.