

Corney & Barrow, Paternoster Square, London EC4

Tuesday 11 December 2012

Just before Christmas a band of CoreNet Global UK Chapter members met together for a lunchtime drink at Corney & Barrow, Paternoster Square, in the shadow of the great dome of St Paul's Cathedral. This iconic building, which has stood guard over London, provided a fitting neighbour to our Christmas celebrations of a truly great year for the Chapter.

Paternoster Row, from which the Square takes its name, was originally the home of publishers and booksellers but was destroyed in the blitz during World War II. Redeveloped in the 1960s, it was again redeveloped in the late 1990s and finally re-opened in 2003. Now it is the home of the London Stock Exchange, investment banks and fund managers.

2012 has been an amazing year for the UK with the Olympics and Paralympics, Andy Murray winning his first major and Bradley Wiggins cycling off with the prize of the Tour de France. It has been no less successful for the UK Chapter which has much to celebrate with a string of successful events. Once again Lucy Scott, of Chapman Bathurst organised an excellent buffet lunch which was jointly sponsored with BW Interiors. Plenty to eat and drink washed down lots of gossip and laughter and a good time was had by all.
