Many of today’s corporations are committed to strengthening the knowledge, skills, and abilities of their corporate real estate (CRE) professionals locally and globally. The Master of Corporate Real Estate (MCR) designation provides essential skills that focus on critical business issues and the mission of the corporate real estate organization in relation to enterprise goals.

Designed for CRE professionals with at least five years of experience, the MCR seminars are focused specifically on ensuring all participants have mastered technical skills within the CRE body of knowledge and have the ability to apply them to the strategic management of CRE. The designation is well-recognized within the profession and, increasingly, by executive-level corporate leaders outside of the CRE domain — a testament to the dedication, specialization, expertise, and knowledge of the Top-Rated Faculty and the designation holders.

Real-World Value for MCR Participants

Delivered by experienced faculty comprised of leading experts in their fields, seminars use an interactive, team-based approach to solve problems, analyze case studies and share experiences. The MCR designation assures clients and colleagues of an advanced competence and successful experience as a CRE professional. Participants are able to:

• Understand how CRE fits into the corporate enterprise;
• Apply CRE best practices and practical approaches to their current work;
• Select specialized professional development seminars to hone skills unique to specific roles within CRE; and
• Solve problems in small groups with peers and faculty from various roles across the CRE profession.

Real Estate’s Impact on Financial Statements
Required Seminar

Where does management start when considering investment options? Financial statements. These valuable reports summarize the present financial condition of a business and are key for management making investment decisions. This seminar will demonstrate the importance of understanding the CFO’s view of corporate real estate (CRE) within the framework of financial reporting.

After taking this seminar, you will be able to answer the “what, why, and how” of financial statements. Learn how real estate transactions impact financial performance measures and how financial statements are used by senior management, financial institutions, investors, and shareholders. Build the bridge between real estate transactions and corporate financial statements.

Learning objectives:
- Describe accounting principles
- Identify performance measures
- Read a financial statement
- Communicate CRE impact on financial statement sections
- Explain how accounting standards impact RE financial reporting
- Identify how accounting standards can influence RE decisions
- Identify the impact of new accounting standards

How will you benefit?
- Identify the CFO view of CRE within the framework of financial reporting
- Review financial performance ratios
- Relate real estate performance to corporate finance criteria
- Understand the inter-relationships between finance and real estate and how that adds value to the corporation

Seminar topics:
- Financial Statements
- Basic Accounting Principles
- Operating Lease Acquisition
- Property Purchase Acquisition
- Ratios: Market Value, Profitability, Liquidity
- Capital (Finance) vs Operating Lease Acquisition
- Lease Accounting Changes
- Sublease
- Property Sale and Property Sale/Leaseback
- Asset Impairment: Mark-to-Market
- Synthetic Lease — Purchase Financing
- Communication CRE Impact

Who should attend?
- CRE professionals who need to understand the CFO’s perspective within the framework of financial reporting
- Business professionals who work with a CFO, Portfolio Manager, Asset Manager, Transaction Specialist, Real Estate Director, or Real Estate Consultant

“The information provided in this class is critical to the discussion between a CFO, CEO and a real estate professional. It is important for the real estate professional to understand the perspective of the CEO and CFO as it relates to real estate and workplace and their role in helping achieve a company’s goals.”

Around the world, business attitudes about how to work have changed. The discipline of workplace strategy has become an essential part of successful corporate real estate (CRE) management. CoreNet Global has added a specialization focused on workplace strategy to the highly-respected MCR designation to support this evolving focus of CRE.

The workplace specialization (MCR.w) provides candidates with a strong foundation in the field of workplace strategy and offers the opportunity to earn professional recognition for additional knowledge gained through the program. A panel of corporate real estate leaders helped CoreNet Global define a comprehensive set of core competencies for the workplace strategist. The MCR.w curriculum develops these competencies through challenging courses taught by workplace strategy experts.

After completing the workplace specialization, you will have a comprehensive understanding of the processes involved in creating a workplace strategy, the fundamental skills and knowledge that a workplace strategist needs, and ways to prevent common pitfalls and barriers. You will learn specific approaches to staying current in the field, and you’ll become part of a community of workplace professionals who exchange ideas and information.

To earn this designation, in addition to the MCR required seminars, take these workplace strategy seminars:

Workplace Strategy Essentials (#1 of 3)
The first in a series of three seminars, this seminar is designed for the CRE professional seeking a greater understanding of the dynamic field and practice of workplace strategy within CRE. You will discuss the broader role and value of workplace strategy, trends, global issues, tools, and technologies. Learn to develop and articulate the value proposition/business case for workplace strategy. Gain the insight needed to take this program back to your organization and successfully identify and implement program elements and methods needed to transition and manage over time.

Workplace Strategy Methodologies (#2 of 3)
This seminar is the second in a series of three seminars designed for the CRE Professional who seeks the workplace specialization designation. It provides CRE professionals with in-depth knowledge and applications of the workplace strategy process, tools, and best practices. This seminar is designed for workplace strategy practitioners to develop their competency level within the field.

Workplace Strategy in Practice (#3 of 3)
This seminar is the third in a series of three seminars designed for the CRE professional who seeks the workplace specialization designation. It provides CRE professionals with the opportunity to further hone their workplace strategy skills through collaboration with other experienced workplace strategy practitioners on real-life programs. With a focus on implementation challenges and solutions, this seminar will increase the candidates’ breadth and depth of knowledge and application within the field.

“The entire workplace series of courses is fantastic and the faculty let their passion and knowledge for the topic shine in everything they bring to the courses. Everything I have learned is immediately applicable and actionable and will allow me to bring new ideas and focus to the topic within my organization.”
