Since 1887, Irrigation Districts have provided vital water resources as well as electric power to rural residents and businesses throughout the state.

Irrigation districts strive to be good stewards of surface and groundwater supplies to meet the needs of agricultural, urban, and environmental communities.

There are 92 Irrigation Districts focused on water delivery services to California communities.

Irrigation Districts operate and maintain reservoirs with millions of gallons of water capacity.

Through innovation and infrastructure, Irrigation Districts have turned seasonally dry regions of the state into year-round producers of crops.

More than 8 3 billion kWh of electricity is produced by Irrigation Districts each year.