ALLAN LAWRENCE (Larry) BROWN was born in Hollywood, California, in 1934. He grew up in Southern California and was so large everyone thought he was older. He started work in the construction trades at age 13.

At age 21 he started his own construction company.

He served in the US Army as an enlisted man during the Korean War. He then went back to college and graduated from UCLA with a degree in marketing and behavioral science.

In 1963, he joined Owens/Corning Fiberglas, and served with them until 1989, when he took early retirement and bought into Oregon Insulation Supply. He started the Exterior Systems Division of his company, representing Dryvit and other exterior products.

Brown passed away on 22 August 2004, in Tigard, Oregon.
