SHELDON WOLFE was born in Indiana in 1949. He graduated from the University of Minnesota Institute of Technology with a BArch in 1975. He worked 10 years in the public sector, the rest in private sector architecture firms. His work included everything from residential through medical, correctional, transportation, and wastewater facilities. He was a regular presenter at chapter education and certification classes, as well as at region conferences, the annual convention, and other organizations. Wolfe continually sought ways to improve the quality of construction documents, and wrote more than 300 construction-related articles. In 2018, the Minneapolis-St. Paul Chapter created the Sheldon Wolfe Communications Award.

His TechNotes series discussed CSI technical documents, specifications, and coordination of construction documents. His GUI Bytes series explored how computers, email, and the Internet can be used to prepare construction documents. Mr. Wolfe Goes to Washington, about CSI Board activities, was written during his term as Institute Director; since then, he wrote under the title Curmudgeon’s Corner. He also has two blogs, Constructive Thoughts and Specific thoughts.

Sheldon’s contributions include the first keyword index for the CSI Manual of Practice, the first electronic versions of MasterFormat and SectionFormat, and direct involvement in the development of MasterFormat 2004 and CSI’s Manual of Practice.
