Discussion Forum on Process Use

Michael Harner
J. Bradley Cousins
Michael Quinn Patton

Process use has emerged as an important aspect of evaluation use over the past fifteen years or so. An issue of importance and relevance to the advancement of the field is whether or not priority should be given to operationalizing the term by way of furthering ongoing research and inquiry or whether continuing to treat the term as a 'sensitizing construct' would be most productive. The discussion forum will focus on audience views and opinions about this issue.
