AAIM invites foundations, publishers, recruiters, and companies that create educational tools, software, and patient care management solutions to partner to support the 2023 APDIM Fall Meeting.

The APDIM Fall Meeting is your chance to get in front of key faculty and staff responsible for internal medicine residency programs, which train the single largest subset of the future physician workforce. Comprising more than one-quarter of the US physician workforce, internal medicine and its subspecialties is almost always the largest single body of users of the electronic medical record, evaluation systems, scheduling software, textbooks, and educational software.

The meeting will bring together 500 internal medicine residency faculty and staff; from program directors to key faculty to program administrators, as individuals who have authority to make decisions about all aspects of the residency program, from evaluation systems to scheduling software to textbooks. They also have regular contact with and significant influence on the future workforce, also known as chief residents, residents, fellows, and students. The faculty usually have multiple clinical and administrative responsibilities in addition to their educational responsibilities.

In 2023, the APDIM Fall Meeting will be in person at the Hilton Baltimore Inner Harbor, which will provide partners opportunities to meet and interact with participants in an interactive setting. AAIM is pleased to offer the following partnership opportunities for the 2023 APDIM Fall Meeting.
