

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Note from the Editor	V
Contributing Authors	VI

SECTION I

Program Administration

1.1 Understanding American Graduate Medical Education	3
1.2 Job Description of the Internal Medicine Residency Program Director.	9
1.3 Job Description of the Internal Medicine Residency Program Administrator	23
1.4 The Resident File	28
1.5 Program Accreditation: Next Accreditation System (NAS)	39
1.6 What Program Directors Need to Know about the CLER Visit	46
1.7 Understanding Psychological Safety and Its Role in Quality Improvement in Graduate Medical Education . . .	52

SECTION II

Program Leadership

2.1 The Program Director as Manager	63
2.2 The New Program Director: Directing Change during Transition.	69
2.3 Residency Program Directors and Clerkship Directors: Finding Common Ground	76
2.4 Residency and Fellowship Program Directors: Coordination and Integration.	82
2.5 Winning Combinations: Information to Help Categorical IM Programs Work with Combined Programs . . .	88
2.6 A Primer on Chief Residency in Internal Medicine.	96

SECTION III

Program Financing

3.1 Financing and GME: Estimating and Communicating the Cost of Running a Residency Program in the Era of the IOM Report	107
3.2 Partnering with a VA Medical Center.	117

SECTION IV

Educating Physicians-in-Training

4.1 Developing a Curriculum.	127
4.2 Seven Factors for Organizational Effectiveness: A Framework for Residency Redesign Using a Continuity Clinic Example.	138
4.3 Teaching in Ambulatory Care.	146
4.4 Designing an Inpatient Ward Service	158
4.5 Incorporating Medical Simulation into an Internal Medicine Residency Program	169
4.6 Improving Resident Teaching Skills: Teaching Residents to Teach.	181
4.7 Teaching and Assessing Quality Improvement in Residency Programs	190
4.8 Incorporating Interprofessional Education within Your Residency Curriculum	195
4.9 Teaching Residents with Learning Disabilities and Learning Difficulties.	201

SECTION V

Assessing Physicians-in-Training

5.1	Feedback in Residency Training	209
5.2	Assessing Clinical Competence in Residents and Fellows	216
5.3	Developing Evaluation Systems	226
5.4	The Clinical Competency Committee	235
5.5	A Systematic Approach to the Resident in Difficulty	247
5.6	From Competency Committee to Remediation and Beyond: Remediation Challenges in the Non-Cognitive Competencies	260
5.7	Legal Issues Regarding Problem Residents	273
5.8	Structured Learning Portfolios in Residency	281
5.9	Procedural Credentialing and Tracking	286
5.10	The Internal Medicine In-Training Examination (IM-ITE)	292

SECTION VI

Recruitment and Retention

6.1	Marketing Residency Programs	299
6.2	Candidate Selection, Interview, and Ranking Process	304
6.3	A Resident Transfer Code of Conduct: Recommendations from APDIM	315
6.4	Diversity in Internal Medicine Residency Programs	317
6.5	International Medical Graduates: Demographics and Career Trends	323
6.6	Acculturation of International Medical Graduate Residents	329

SECTION VII

Mentoring and Professional Development

7.1	Establishing a Mentorship Program for Your Residency	339
7.2	Mentoring Residents, with Special Consideration of Women and Minorities	347
7.3	Facilitating Resident Scholarly Activity	361
7.4	Guiding Residents through the Fellowship Selection and Application Process	368
7.5	Navigating Residents from Burnout to Resiliency	372
7.6	Mental Health Crises: A Four-Step Approach	385
7.7	Residents with Disabilities	392
7.8	Safe and Sustainable Workflow: SBARing Duty Hours	397
7.9	Balancing Faculty Scholarship and Career Development with Clinical Practice	405