President's Message

Hello DeVry-Keller Community,

I hope everyone is keeping safe and well, and that you had a happy holiday season.

As we work through this challenging time, we will continue to hold all club activities virtually and share with you valuable upcoming events, competitions, scholarship opportunities and educational resources.

I would like to thank everyone who participated in making our first Mock Interview series with Randy Deyulio; Long Island Managing Partner at Deloitte & Touche LLP, a success in December (with 100+ members registered and 52 in attendance) Link. We look forward to beginning the new year with part two of this series, our CMA Review Series with Prof. Xiao (Faculty Advisor), and a Cybersecurity series with Prof. Lamour (Faculty Advisor).

As we enter this new year, I hope it will be full of happiness, health, and opportunities for everyone.

Sincerely,

Sophie Evans. DeVry-Keller Student Accounting Club, President

How To Interview with the Big 4 Series- Deloitte- Part I

On December 17th we held our first Interview Series webinar; "How to Interview with the Big 4 Series- Deloitte- Part I", with guest speaker Randy Deyulio; Long Island Managing Partner at Deloitte & Touche LLP. Randy provided a number of invaluable insights into the skills and prerequisites employers look for in candidates and how candidates can differentiate themselves.

Biography

Guest Speaker:
Randy (Randolph) Deyulio
Long Island Managing Partner
Deloitte & Touche LLP

Randy Deyulio serves as the Long Island managing partner, responsible for all marketplace and operational activities, including overall strategy, financial performance, talent recruitment and development, as well as, delivery of the regional audit, tax, advisory and consulting services. He brings a deep understanding of the local marketplace and top-of-mind issues for audit committees, CFOs, and senior executives.

Randy has over 25 years of experience serving SEC registrants and other large, multinational companies within the consumer & industrial products and technology industries. He has guided many clients through various public filings, bond offerings, SEC matters, reorganizations, spinoffs, acquisitions, IFRS implementations, refinancing transactions, and internal control assessments.

Randy is also on the board of several professional organizations and charities; including the Institute of Management Accountants, the Long Island Association, and the American Heart Association.

Could you please tell us a bit more about your position and what led you to becoming a partner at Deloitte?

"The great thing about public accounting is there are no two days that are the same...sometimes I'll be dealing with accounting issues, sometimes audit, sometimes tax, sometimes I'll deal in operational things. I do recruiting, I do community service. There's just an endless number of things that I do in a given week, in a given month, and if you're the type of person that likes diversity and ever changing tasks and jobs then public accounting is a great place to start."

How has the accounting and auditing industry changed over the past decade and what predictions do you have for the future?

"There are a lot of things that have changed over the years, but I think the biggest thing is going to be around technology...We have used technology to do things more efficiently and more effectively". Randy noted that auditing is about gathering and analysing data. Technology enables a company, like Deloitte, to decrease the amount of time it takes to gather information and to look for anomalies and trends; "the goal of all those is to be able to add value or to minimise risks for the company."

What would you say are the top 5+ things employers look for in candidates?

- solid ethical behaviour
- teamwork
- a good GPA
- communication skills; verbal (speaking and listening) and written
- adaptability
- the ability to juggle multiple responsibilities

How has Deloitte approached the work-life balance for employees before and after this pandemic?

Randy shared that Deloitte promotes a collective disconnect philosophy from work related communications (i.e emails) on holidays, weekends, and after work hours to help its employees to sustain a work-life balance.

He further noted that finding and preserving your passion is key to maintaining balance. "If you give away what is most important to you, eventually you will burn out."

How the IMA can benefit our participants in pursuing and achieving their career goals?

Randy explained that the IMA is an invaluable association that allows students to learn about current events, how to network, and helps them to build key relationships. "The IMA is full of people who are CFO's, controllers, partners, that work in your local business community"... "You are going to be interacting with business leaders that could share their experience and also possibly opportunities that are out there."

What would be one piece of advice you wish someone would have given you?

"Never be satisfied with just what you are doing currently." Randy emphasized the importance of continually challenging yourself and developing your skillsets in order to make yourself more marketable.

About the DeVry-Keller Student Accounting Club

“Together we can learn, connect, and achieve.”

Our Mission

Explore our career destinations together.

Our Goal

Open doors of opportunities for all, to unlock our potential of becoming globally responsible citizens in this increasingly competitive community.

Our Strategy

To connect like-minded students with two global professional organizations, IMA and AICPA, in order to enhance our global network in the field of accounting, finance, project management and information systems; to sharpen our communication and data driven decision making skills and knowledge through mentorships and internships, career development seminars, student leadership conferences, scholarship competitions, and CMA, CPA, and Data Analytic certifications. www.devryuniversity.imanet.org

Our Story

Under the inspiration of Prof. Xiao and the dedicated support of Adlin, student services manager, the DeVry-Keller Accounting Club was formed in March 2020 with 2 student members (Davia and Sulyman). Our club has since grown to 31 members in the past ten months under the new leadership of Sophie, Sulyman, Elvina, Francis, and Mohammed. We defined our mission; built the leadership board and 2 committee teams; hosted 9 virtual board meetings and 1 IMA webinar; shared more than 100 webinars and 6 summer and 3 winter activities; and designed 2 student club newsletters. We have completed our Phase I Project; building the 1st IMA DeVry University Virtual Student Chapter #0601 (the 2nd IMA Global Virtual Student Chapter) with the support of the DeVry legal team, Academic team (Prof. Xiao and Faculty Chair, Dr. Lamour), IMA Global and LI Chapter. Since then, we have expanded our ecosystem to include the National Faculty Chair, Dr. Weber and Assistant Dean, Dr. Schmitz who participated in our November board meeting and the AZ Valley of the Sun Chapter joined our strategic partners network.

Faculty Advisor's New Year Resolution Message

According to historian James West Davidson, in our future history books, there will be a special chapter on the Year 2020 entitled: Matters of Life and Breath. As we are moving towards, hopefully, the brighter, resilient and sustainable 2021, it is predicted that the future will be even more accelerated and increasingly difficult for humans. In the era of economic and technological evolutions reshaping the way we work, your future will greatly depend on being a signal in the noisy universe of human capital (Harvard Business Review). Reading the mission and the strategy of the ACCT Club, one can only be impressed with its members' focus on becoming globally responsive citizens.

The New Year's message and the proposed resolution, I have for you, is to take your goal one step further and focus on developing your personal brand. A brand is what people say about you when you are not in the room. (J. Bezos, CEO Amazon). It is what separates you from others in similar positions. It is more important to know and project on others what makes you different as opposed to what makes you better. Because branding is about creating emotional connections, your personal branding starts with self-knowledge. Think about your personal branding statement that would convey your unique and captivating promise of value that is attracting attention and makes others want to know more about you.

Finally, in the pursuit of our professional career, make sure you care for your well-being by realizing the importance of some type of health and wellness regiment that would allow you to maintain work-life balance. Wishing you all a very successful and Happy New Year 2021.- Dr. Ewa Schmitz

Biography

Dr. Ewa Schmitz has more than 20 years of experience in education. She began her teaching career in Poland as an elementary and special education teacher. CONGRATULATIONS!

on your induction into

The National Society of Leadership and Success

My journey at DeVry University has opened so many doors to a brand new path to success. The opportunity of growth provided through the mentorship of professors within the MBA program has allowed me to expand my professional and personal horizons. In my last year of studies, I received notice of a nomination made to NSLS.

Professor Xiao, allowed me to grow in to a leadership role as together we founded the DeVry University Virtual Student Chapter, effective September 2020. This opportunity allowed me to get the training and requirements to set better goals, visions, and milestones to being a successful leader.

Through events that I have participated in with the Long Island Chapter, and IMA webinars/events, I have come to appreciate and become motivated into finding my path not only as a leader but also as a potential business owner within my next five-year goals. I encourage everyone to look into the IMA Chapters and The NSLS to get more information on how to commence their path to success!

Board Members' Stories

Growing up in the Caribbean island of Jamaica I always aspired being in the international market in my professional life because I love travelling, hence, I am here in New York working on that dream.

I read for a Bachelor of Science in Social Work in Jamaica because I wanted to help people. While doing my internship at the Department of Corrections I realized that I had a love for the justice system, hence, I read for a Master of Science in Criminal Justice here in New York and graduated a honorary member of the National Criminal Justice Honor Society. The irony is that I had years of experience in business but never studied in the field. A year ago, I decided to build upon my experience, and I am currently pursuing a MBA with a concentration in Project Management.

I joined the DeVry-Keller Accounting Club/ IMA DeVry University Virtual Student Chapter because I wanted to broaden my horizon, be apart of history in the making as we are the founding members of the club, and to network with experienced professionals across the nation. I am glad to be a part of such a great club that provides support for all members, keeping us in the loop at all times and promotes fun activities to help us live a balanced life especially in a difficult time like this when we are all dealing with a pandemic.

IMA Webinar Reviews by Members

Creative Financing Options for the Financial Challenges Caused by COVID-19

hosted by the IMA Long Island Chapter on Tuesday, October 27, 2020

written by Mohammed Nasiruddin Khan, Club Treasurer

What did you learn through this webinar?

Financing is the life blood of a business. Without financing, a business cannot support its customers, suppliers, and employees. In the current chaotic environment, each commercial bank is operating differently. Some banks have stopped taking on new customers, others are staffing up their work-out departments, which handle distressed customers, some banks are using this as an opportunity to charge default rates, which result in increased pricing to borrowers in default of their loan covenants and other banks are trying to limit their current exposure by asking existing borrowers to find new lenders. Every business has been impacted differently by the financial effects of COVID-19. The COVID-19 pandemic has equally created new areas of opportunities and closed many doors too. For instance, lex Jobs, an online job board is giving opportunities to work virtually and flexibly in more than 50 categories.

Why should students participate in IMA webinars?

Attending webinars enables an individual to grow knowledge of the finest practices that are pertinent to IMA. Using webinars as a form of education can increase knowledge of the latest trends and strategies and at the same time, increase the professional worth of IMA.

Industry Expert's Experience

Forensic Accounting

Lawrence Vigna, CFE
Supervisory Forensic Accountant
FBI Phoenix Division

Many of us have heard about forensic accounting but are not familiar with what it takes to work in the field. In this article, Lawrence Vigna, takes us through his journey in the field, specifically working with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

What is a forensic accountant's role and how does it differ from a public accountant or a managerial accountant?

In general, a Forensic Accountant is examining data to specifically identify any instances of fraud or waste and will normally be brought in when allegations of misconduct are identified. Cases in which a Forensic Accountant are used generally have a litigation aspect, and it's common for a Forensic Accountant to testify in court as an expert witness. Conversely, the role of a public accountant (speaking in an audit setting) is as an independent third party to opine on whether the information presented in the financial statements is presented fairly and is free of material misstatement. An audit provides reasonable, but not absolute assurance and an auditor is not responsible for detection of all fraud, but rather for detecting fraud that would materially misstate the financials.

What does a typical work week look like for a forensic accountant?

The answer is, there is no typical work week! The role of a Forensic Accountant is fast-paced and ever-changing based on the cases we work. In our capacity, regular work activities include examining voluminous financial and business data, performing research on subjects and subject businesses, participating in interviews, attending meetings with the investigative team and/or prosecutors, and writing reports based on the results of our examination. Other tasks that are less frequent include participating in search warrants and both attending and testifying in court proceedings.

Does your job require a specific degree, certification (e.g., CMA, CPA, CFE...), or list of skillsets?

We do require an accounting degree and look for candidates with strong oral and written communications skills and strong computer and "data-mining" skills, especially in Excel. Many of the candidates I've currently seen apply for the position have a master's degree and one or more professional licenses including CPA, CFE and CIA. The FBI Forensic Accountants are the financial "experts" and the degree(s) and license(s) add that credibility when we testify in court.

How has the role of a forensic accountant changed over the past decade and what changes do you think will happen over the next decade?

Speaking from my 25+ years of FBI experience, I've seen the role of the Forensic Accountant expand from primarily working white-collar crime investigations in my early years to now working on cases across all FBI violations including drug/violent crime, public corruption, counterterrorism, and counterintelligence. Forensic accountants following the money can lead to valuable actionable intelligence on our investigations. Bank and credit card records are an intelligence goldmine, often helping to identify additional subjects, victims, and a subject's pattern of life. I don't see the work changing much in the next 10 years, but rather the subject's evolving in how they carry out the criminal activity. We've seen more and more investigations involving the internet (cyber-related crime) and subjects using cryptocurrency to move money. Since crypto transfers are instantaneous and anonymous for the most part, tracing the funds has its challenges.

What advice would you give to students who wish to pursue a profession in forensic accounting?

The FBI looks for candidates with an accounting degree and at least 2+ years of professional work experience. If you are in school currently, DO AN INTERNSHIP!!! Many internships could lead to a permanent job after graduation, building your resume and professional work experience. The FBI loves candidates with public accounting experience, including audit and tax, as well as banking or securities investigations experience. Focus on education, experience and obtaining a professional license.

The FBI's Forensic Accountant Unit posts quarterly for external candidate applications on FBIJOBS.GOV. Information about FBI internships and other FBI career opportunities can also be found on this website.

Biography

Lawrence Vigna is the Supervisory Forensic Accountant for the FBI Phoenix Division and manages employees in both the Phoenix and Tucson offices. He possesses a Bachelor of Science (B.S.) in Accounting, a B.S. in Criminal Justice and is currently a Certified Fraud Examiner (CFE). He began his FBI career in the FBI Tucson office in 1995 and transferred to the Phoenix office in 2000. He has extensive experience in Counterterrorism and Domestic Terrorism investigations. He also has experience in White Collar Crime investigations including mortgage fraud, public corruption, and securities fraud.
