Reflection

- ▶ Ugray Z, Lasdon L, Glover F, Kelly J, Marti R
- ▶ 10/14/2019
- ▶ When we started our work on nonlinear mixed integer programming in 2004 we felt that there was an opportunity to expand on the designs of multistart algorithms to solve these problems. Our flexible framework to combine heuristics as trial solution generators, local solvers supplied with the trial solutions as starting points, procedures to deal with discrete variables, and the inclusion of starting point filters proved to be quite effective. The resulting system described in our 2007 paper incorporated the OptQuest implementation of the scatter search heuristic to generate the trial solutions and the LSGRG local solver to provide high accuracy solutions. Our work showed that the applications of OptQuest in the simulation optimization domain and of LSGRG in the nonlinear optimization domain could be integrated via a multistart framework to provide a useful technology for additional important classes of problems.
- ▶ As of October 2019, there are 290 citations of this paper listed in Scopus. The three most cited areas are Engineering, Computer Science and Mathematics. They indicate the usefulness of the approach for applications and as a starting point for further algorithm developments. Another mark of the versatility of the framework is the existence of multistart solvers in many modeling languages and platforms, including MATLAB, TOMLAB, AIMMS, LINGO, and Frontline Systems' Enhanced Excel Solver.
- ▶ We would like to thank the Editors of the INFORMS Journal on Computing and the members of the 2019 IJOC Test of Time Paper Award committee for selecting our paper for this award. We also wish to remember our late colleague, John Plummer, who contributed so much to our work.
