IPWEA Aotearoa/New Zealand Strengthens Member Support with New Team Appointment

IPWEA New Zealand is pleased to welcome Rosa Senescall to the team, joining Country Head Steve Mooney as the organisation continues to expand its presence across Aotearoa. Her appointment strengthens IPWEA's ability to engage directly with members and industry stakeholders throughout the country.

Rosa joins IPWEA with a diverse professional background spanning relationship management, operations, customer experience, and executive recruitment. Throughout her career, she has worked across stakeholder engagement, community building, and operational improvement, partnering with clients and candidates to deliver people-focused outcomes while leading initiatives in customer experience, compliance, and business operations.

Her appointment reflects IPWEA New Zealand's ongoing investment in growing its local presence and ensuring members receive the support, connections, and professional development opportunities they need to thrive.

"Rosa's experience in building strong relationships and creating meaningful engagement experiences makes her an excellent addition to our team," said David Jenkins, CEO IPWEA. "As we continue to grow our presence across New Zealand, having more boots on the ground enables us to better connect with our members, understand their needs, and deliver greater value to the public works and infrastructure sector."

Rosa is passionate about helping organisations foster engaged communities and creating environments where people feel connected, supported, and empowered. Her people-first approach aligns closely with IPWEA New Zealand's mission of supporting infrastructure and public works professionals through education, networking, advocacy, and industry leadership.

"I'm excited to join IPWEA and contribute to an organisation that plays such an important role in supporting infrastructure professionals across New Zealand," said Rosa. "I look forward to building relationships with our members, understanding the challenges and opportunities facing the sector, and helping create valuable experiences that strengthen our community."

Rosa's appointment reflects IPWEA New Zealand's ongoing investment in building a stronger local presence and ensuring members have access to the connections, insights and support they need to succeed.

Welcome to the team, Rosa.
