Change management series: Bringing it all together

<https://www.thesasig.com/calendar/event/24-03-11-awareness/>

In the context of a busy, noisy organisation, how best do we bring the best practices of change management into everything we and our teams do? How do we measure success in ways that people care about?

“I didn’t mean to do that!” – Understanding human error for cybersecurity

<https://www.thesasig.com/calendar/event/24-03-13-awareness/>

In this talk, we will look at the field of human error studies, investigate why those errors occur, and more importantly, what you can do to stop them. By leverage behavioural data and employing the same psychological techniques utilised by cybercriminals, you’ll learn how to reduce these errors.

The chief's brief with Pat Ryan CBE, Founder, Cyber Girls First

Future

<https://www.thesasig.com/calendar/event/24-03-15-evening/>

Pat Ryan CBE is a remarkable woman with a distinguished career in Royal Navy Intelligence, being involved in several high-profile events of the 1960s. Her civilian career was just as challenging, being one of the first females in a senior position with PwC. When she 'retired' from paid employment, she put her time and energy into two key projects, firstly, kitting out every children's ward in the country with personal computers and, latterly, encouraging and inspiring girls to consider careers in cyber.
