SASIG Webinars

Wednesday 31 May 2023, 11am-12noon (BST)

Why do lemons exist in the cybersecurity market and how can we avoid them?

https://www.thesasig.com/calendar/event/23-05-31-vendor/

This webinar discusses whether we have a 'market for lemons' in cybersecurity and, if so, how do we fix it? As well as discussing how we should define cybersecurity 'efficacy', Joseph Hubback joins us to share some primary research based on interviews with more than 100 CISOs and other industry stakeholders about their experiences with ineffective solutions (lemons). Joseph will also propose changes to market incentives to increase efficacy and rid ourselves of 'lemons', based on a Charter for improvement that he co-authored with Professor Ciaran Martin.

Friday 2 June, 11am-12noon (BST)

People-centric methods for ransomware prevention https://www.thesasig.com/calendar/event/23-06-02-resilience/

Despite all the technical controls organisations have in place – and all the security awareness training they throw at people – ransomware attacks are still on the rise. Now, with new legislation that could make it illegal to pay ransom looming around the globe, organisations are going to be more reliant on their people to stave off the worst. In this webinar, Joe Giddens will deep dive into the latest findings from Cybsafe's Science & Research team on the often overlooked (but highly effective) people-centric methods for ransomware prevention.
