

ANIMAL LAW SECTION

CATS, COWS & STATE CONSTITUTIONS

When Professor David Favre retired, the Animal Law Section established a lecture series in his honor, and he graciously agreed to deliver the inaugural lecture.

Professor Favre will explore the final stage in the formal development of Animal Rights: amending state constitutions to recognize the presence of animals within the legal system. This development is governed more by politics than by ethics or legal analysis. What should the goals be? What language would be most effective? And how might constitutional change happen?

The lecture will take place in person in the Castle Boardroom (Room 343) at Michigan State University College of Law and virtually via Zoom.
