

Julie Janeway, MSA, JD

Julie Janeway has been a Michigan health law attorney for twenty-six years. She is currently General Counsel for Advize Health and also serves as the Director of Healthcare Administration/Operations Support. Prior to coming to Advize, she served as the Chief Legal Counsel for an international healthcare company, and she practiced with Foley, Baron, Metzger & Juip, PLLC, specializing in healthcare law. Her practice included (but was not limited to) compliance, risk management, business/corporate, employment, pharmacy law, healthcare professional licensing defense, PSO/PSES development, independent internal and parallel investigations, contracting, and all related training for practitioners or businesses in the healthcare industry. She has consulted and trained at a significant number of healthcare organizations, practices, hospitals/systems, healthcare equipment and device manufacturers, and other healthcare vendor and research companies across North America. She also serves as the General Counsel and the current Past-President of the Michigan Association for Healthcare Quality and has served on several national healthcare organization Boards of Directors. In 2022, Julie was honored to be named as one of the 30 Most Influential Women in Law by Lawyer's Weekly.

Julie taught Healthcare Law, Healthcare Administration, Healthcare Program Planning & Evaluation Administrative Law, and Employment Law in the Masters' and Doctoral programs as an Adjunct Professor at Central Michigan University for eighteen years. She also taught senior-level undergraduate courses in fourteen different fields of law, including Constitutional Law, Civil litigation, Crisis Response and Communication, and Sports/Entertainment Law. For the past twelve years, she has been an Adjunct Professor teaching Health Law, Healthcare Compliance, Medical Forensics and the Law, and the Law of Business and Corporate Organizations at Western Michigan University Law School. She is also a frequent presenter regarding current and emerging legal, compliance, and risk issues for several state and national healthcare industry professional associations, and she has served as a legal reporter for ABC News.

She emphasizes the real-world application of theory through experiential learning and practical application and has a tremendous talent for breaking down complex concepts into understandable (quite often humorous) and usable information. She has published extensively as the author of several books and book chapters, and a substantial number of white papers and peer-reviewed articles on legal, non-legal, medical, and medico/pharmaco-legal topics. Julie is an in-demand dynamic speaker and trainer who sees the world as an interactive, practical learning environment, and a place to meet new colleagues, work together, and continually improve the business of healthcare and the delivery of healthcare services nationally and internationally.
