

Jayme Frank is the 2013 Wisconsin APN of the Year award recipient. Jayme is a Pediatric Nurse Practitioner in pediatric cardiology at the University of Wisconsin American Family Children's Hospital in Madison, WI. Jayme was nominated by her nurse practitioner colleagues due to her expertise, leadership, and contributions to care of pediatric cardiology patients. Jayme has particular expertise in pediatric patients with pacemakers and defibrillators.

Jayme is always willing to teach and share her knowledge with others. She is always willing to provide formal education for inpatient and outpatient nursing staff regarding pediatric arrhythmia identification and management. She also guest lectures in the UW-Madison Pediatric Nurse Practitioner program, as well as in the undergraduate nursing program.

Jayme is a tremendous role model professionally and personally. She is a past recipient of the Nursing Excellence award at the AFCH. She served as a past President of the Wisconsin chapter of NAPNAP. She participates in research studies, shares her expertise, and has participated in many outreach and volunteer activities in the community. Congratulations to Jayme!
