NASN Names 2022 National Academy of School Nursing Fellows

Most prestigious recognition that members can receive from NASN

Silver Spring, MD March 31, 2022 —The National Association of School Nurses (NASN) recently named seven professionals for induction into the National Academy of School Nursing. They are:

- Ann Nichols, North Carolina
- Brenna Morse, Massachusetts
- Ellen McCabe, New York
- Beth Jameson, New Jersey
- Laurie Combe, Texas
- Robin Cogan, New Jersey
- Sheila Caldwell, New Jersey

The induction ceremony will take place Thursday, June 30, 2022, during Annual Business Meeting at the NASN2022 Conference in Atlanta, Georgia.

The honor of Fellow is the most prestigious recognition that members can receive from NASN. It is a symbol of superior achievement in school nursing and exceptional contributions to NASN. The depth and breadth of the Fellow's imprint on the field is extraordinary. Their contributions have had significant and enduring impact to the professional association and more broadly to school health and student well-being. Fellows' exemplary leadership qualities and achievements are recognized by many, both inside and outside of school nursing and educational spheres of influence.

The National Academy of School Nursing Fellows was founded in 1997 and has inducted 107 school nursing fellows.
