

Saved a Life Award

School nurses save lives in so many different ways. We evaluate and respond to the emergency needs of students and adults in our buildings, whether it is an individual with a known health concern or not. Examples include administering an epipen for anaphylaxis, assisting a student with severe hypoglycemia emergencies, first aid for choking, or providing CPR. Since our practices vary greatly throughout the state, it is difficult to define what it means to save a life. While in almost all cases, 911 will have been called, if you have saved a life you will know.

The SNOW Board would like to recognize nurses who have saved a life. If you or one of your colleagues has done something which you think deserves recognition, please share it with our SNOW Board. The Board would like to share these stories with our members and the public.
