Asthma flares should be treated at the first sign of symptoms—any delay increases risk of hospitalization.

10% of students in the United States have asthma
60% of these students experience an exacerbation each year
49% of these students missed one or more days due to asthma

For many children, asthma flare-ups happen at school. An inhaler can reverse asthma symptoms, but what if the student forgets their inhaler at home? The only option is for the school personnel to call 911. But this doesn’t have to be the case, if asthma medication is kept in stock.

An easy solution is to allow schools to stock albuterol medication.

Organizations in Support

[Logos of various organizations supporting the cause]