ENLS SOCIAL MEDIA GUIDELINES

TIPS + TRICKS

When posting, please keep in mind the following best practices. It is highly encouraged that you use social media as part of your promotions for the course.

• Always use the ENLS hashtag with each post on Twitter and Facebook: #ENLS
• Tag the ENLS social media account in your posts:
  » Twitter: type @enlscourse and automatically tag the account.
  » Facebook: type @ENLS and a small box should pop up; you can select the “Emergency Neurological Life Support (ENLS)” account to tag.
• Use the approved ENLS logo and graphics with your post for brand recognition and credibility.
• Post frequently.
  » Twitter: Posting several times per week is acceptable given the short and quick nature of the platform.
  » Facebook: Posting approximately 2-3 times per week is recommended.
  » LinkedIn: Posting about once per week, but increasing to 2 or 3 times per week closer to registration deadlines or the course.
• Keep your posts short.
  » Remember: Twitter has a 280-character limit, so be concise in your message.
• If you have a call to action in your post, be sure to include a link where your audience can find more information and sign up for the course.
  » Bitly (https://bitly.com) is a free tool that will shorten links so they don’t take up characters in your post.

POST BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER THE EVENT

• Before the event: post about registering for the course, what to expect, topics the course will cover, who should attend, why this education is so important, etc.
• During the event: post a picture or two of action shots of attendees learning, a full room of attendees engaged in conversation and learning, groups of attendees smiling together, etc. Only one or two posts during the event is fine.
• After the event: thank your attendees, post any pictures from the event, major takeaways or highlights from the course, any follow-up information your audience needs to know, “if you missed it” post linking to other ENLS courses offered, etc.

Be attentive to your social media accounts and regularly check them for comments, messages, and other engagements and respond in a timely manner.
