

Trevor Day

Trevor Day is the Deputy Procurement Commissioner for the City of Philadelphia. The Procurement Department is the central purchasing and materials management agency for the City of Philadelphia. Its goal is to acquire services, supplies, equipment and construction at the lowest price that meets the City's needs while ensuring a fair and open process.

Day leads the executive management team that is in the midst of implementing a three year strategic plan to transform procurement efforts. Prior to joining the Procurement Department, Day held finance and contract management positions for the previous 10 years with two City Departments: the Office of Innovation and Technology and the Capital Project Division. He also sat on a Procurement Reform Committee out of the Managing Director's Office.

Trevor Day earned his Masters of Business Administration from Eastern University, St. David's, PA and has a Bachelor's of Arts in Economics from Bates College in Lewiston, ME.
