

LIAM DORPALEN-BARRY

Liam is an advisor to leadership at governments around the world on how to optimize their procurement functions and processes, and an experienced public speaker. He currently serves as President and CEO of Govlist, a company that helps governments run better through modern procurement software. Prior to Govlist, he's held roles with Deloitte Consulting's Strategy & Operations group, and the Institute of International Finance. He's also had the honor of speaking about the intersection of government procurement and technology to audiences at the International City/County Management Association (ICMA), Stanford Graduate School of Business, and University of California Berkeley.