How I Got Into Histology By: Frank Vana

After I was informed that I would have a sudden retirement from the military I decided to go ahead and start doing college classes. I was looking through a list of online majors at a random community college to study and just went down the list until I saw Histology. Immediately I thought, “hey I like history, maybe this will be good.” After a quick search about the subject I was even more in love than before. I always liked the medical sciences and after getting a quick walkthrough of the basic lab, I decided histology was for me! I got an apprenticeship through a program the Navy had a few years ago and did online courses until I got my Associate’s in Histotechnology and I’ve loved every moment of my job since!
