Drinking and Wastewater Funds Receive Larger Allocations

Vermont will receive an extra $63 million from President Biden's infrastructure law for the state's drinking and wastewater loan funds, the Times Argus reports. This brings the total allocation for 2022 to about $80 million. The funds will be divided among several categories, including $30 million for lead service line replacement, $8 million for emerging contaminants, and general improvements. State lawmakers indicated the funding would also help support vibrant, walkable downtowns in Vermont.
