

Jeremy is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire (UNH) where he received a BS (2010) and MS (2014) in Civil Engineering/Water Resources. He holds professional license in New Hampshire.

Jeremy started his engineering career working for his father, Jacques Belanger, LLS as part of a survey field crew prior to working as a summer intern and part-time employee with Gomez and Sullivan, DPC (GSE) while taking classes at UNH. After graduate school, Jeremy continued his career with Gomez and Sullivan as a Water Resources Engineer conducting bathymetric surveys and habitat restorations projects, Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Flood Insurance Studies (FIS), Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) relicensing studies, hydroelectric generation analysis, hydraulic dam break analysis and inundation mapping, and dam removal feasibility and design.

The desire to be closer to his family and familiar surroundings brought Jeremy back to New Hampshire in 2015 when he accepted a position as a Civil Project Engineer with TFMoran, Inc. (TFM). In his nearly five years with TFM Jeremy has made himself indispensable with his tireless work ethic, professionalism and enthusiasm for each assignment. Jeremy's efforts have not gone unnoticed, as he was recently promoted to Senior Project Engineer, making him the youngest to achieve such a title in TFM's 50+ years of operation. At TFM he is responsible for the engineering design and permitting of land development projects and has experience in site planning, drainage design, sewer design, and local and state permitting for residential, commercial, industrial, municipal and energy projects.

Jeremy is an active member of the community and gives back in many ways. After moving back to New Hampshire, he began volunteering for UpReach Therapeutic Equestrian Center, Inc. (UpReach). UpReach serves individuals with a wide range of physical, emotional, and psychological disabilities through year-round, equine-assisted activities and therapies. Jeremy is a regular at the ASCE-NH Younger Member volunteer night at New Horizons Homeless Shelter and Food Pantry, and volunteers at various TFM organized activities such as In-Town Manchester's Adopt-A-Block event.

Jeremy lives with his husband Eric, their dogs Cooper and Callie and cat Meaty in Dunbarton, NH. Jeremy is an avid outdoorsmen and traveler and in his free time can be found snowboarding, hiking or otherwise engulfed in a good book.
