Metal Recycling Company Will Pay for New Water Treatment Plant

The city of Dover has reached a settlement with New England Metal Recycling Inc., which polluted a major city aquifer. The company will pay more than $13 million to construct a new water treatment facility and fund its operation for the first three years, according to Foster's Daily Democrat.

Last year, the company was fined $2.7 million, the largest fine ever levied in New Hampshire for a hazardous waste violation, after it buried crushed car materials that leaked PFAs into the city's water supply.

Infrastructure Law Funds Bridge and Road Repair, Transportation Upgrades

The federal bipartisan infrastructure law will pay to repair and rebuild roads and bridges in New Hampshire, with a focus on climate change mitigation, resilience, equity, and safety for all users, including cyclists and pedestrians. In New Hampshire, there are 215 bridges and over 698 miles of highway in poor condition, according to the Department of Transportation. The state is expected to receive approximately $1.4 billion over five years in federal highway formula funding for highways and bridges.

In addition, $126 million over five years will be spent on improving public transportation in New Hampshire. Funding will also cover modernization of freight rail, increased EV charging options, airport improvements, and other infrastructure updates.
