Governor Signs Wind Power Bills

Governor Chris Sununu has signed two bills aimed at helping the state with complex financial and regulatory challenges associated with major offshore wind projects, according to The Center Square.

The first will require the state Public Utilities Commission to set criteria the state should use when considering power purchase agreements for offshore wind. The second will give the state regulatory authority over any wind projects within 200 miles off the coastline. Currently, the state only has a say over potential projects up to 3 miles off the coastline. Read more.

Smart Camera Sends Environmental Data After Weather Events

Vue Robotics, located in Portsmouth, has created a solar powered camera with environmental sensors that provides real-time weather condition updates at key infrastructure sites. Increasingly volatile weather events caused by climate change is making such innovations desirable.

The new technology, called ARC1, reduces the need for on-site inspections by people. "Vue's service will better and more quickly inform the operational decisions that key stakeholders need to make leading up to, during, and after critical weather events," Vue Robotics cofounder and CEO, Patrick Baglien said. "The data our ARC1s provide are essential to supporting operational decisions, mitigating risk, and reducing loss."

The low light, high-definition camera uses an infrared optical sensor that accurately measures ground and object temperature, a gas sensor with artificial intelligence, and an integrated high-linearity and high-accuracy pressure, humidity, and temperature sensors. It can detect volatile organic compounds and gases like carbon monoxide in the part per billion range, the company reports. Read more.
