NWSA ConScientCE 2008
Dear Colleagues:

Welcome to my home town and to NWSA's 29th annual conference! I am very pleased to welcome you to Cincinnati, the home of Greater's ice cream. I hope you've had a chance to look at all the wonderful information in "Welcome to Cincinnati: A Brief Feminist Guide for Conference Goers" that Anne Runyan, head of the University of Cincinnati's Department of Women's Studies, provided in the spring NWSAction. This issue of NWSAction also included "A Short (and far from complete) Race, Class, and Gender History" that Anne developed.

We do want you to attend the many stimulating sessions, hear Patricia Hill Collins's keynote address, buy new books or other items from our vendors, and meet many new and old friends. But, in your spare time, you may want to take a short walk up the street to the Isaac M. Wise Temple, the birthplace of Reform Judaism, and to City Hall, where Cincinnati's African American and women mayors have presided over the city. There's probably some event happening on Fountain Square, and don't be surprised to find flying pig statues in various places. Check out the Cincinnati women's organizations which are showcasing their work in the exhibit hall or ride the Route 17 bus up to Northside, the neighborhood where I grew up and now one of the centers of the city's gay and lesbian community.

Last year, we celebrated our thirtieth anniversary as an organization and marked the conclusion of a strategic planning process that was made possible through funding from the Ford Foundation. We are now working on the implementation process for that plan, and there is much exciting work ahead. Some of it may see bureaucratic, like discussing and, I hope, adopting new by-laws, but all of it is designed to make us a stronger organization.

At our Governing Council meeting in January, we decided to focus on five major areas of concern, including advancing women's studies scholarship and continuing our anti-oppression and anti-racism work. To do this, we need your support. Please become involved through constituent groups or as committee members. Please attend the Membership Assembly meeting Friday evening and share your perspectives with members of the Delegate Assembly. During the year, feel free to use our discussion boards to share your ideas. Next year, consider running for a position on the Governing Council, as a Member at Large, or as a member of the Conflict Resolution Committee.

As part of the strategic planning process, we will be moving the conference to November next year. We will be meeting in Atlanta, and I trust there will be many opportunities to explore the city's rich African American heritage while we are there. Moving the conference to November should allow us to offer more opportunities to focus on job opportunities for our members, and we hope that those of you who will have openings will plan to interview at the meeting.

Finally, as I close my two-year term as president, I want to welcome Beverly Guy-Sheftall as the next NWSA president and thank everyone with whom it has been my privilege to work for your passion, your commitment to NWSA, and your commitment to social justice.

Sincerely,

Barb Howe

Dear Colleague,

I am delighted to welcome you to the National Women's Studies Association 29th annual meeting.

Our conference theme is "Resisting Hegemonies: Race and Sexual Politics in Nation, Region, Empire." Confronting racism and homophobia are central to the theoretical work of women's and gender studies and constitute ongoing struggles among the field's practitioners. In the past, Black feminist thought and LGBT, queer, and sexuality studies have offered productive and important challenges to the field of women's studies. Emphasizing race and sexual politics in this conference theme serves to honor these major theoretical contributions and to remind us that undoing the long history of racism and homophobia in women's and gender studies, Cincinnati, and beyond is an ongoing process that requires further study and action.

The conference will include some exciting features that build our past successes. A Tribute Panel celebrates important texts that have set new directions for the field, and we are pleased to feature a tribute to black feminist thought.

The conference program will also include a series of scheduled networking events for various constituencies within NWSA; check the program book to find scheduled meetings of interest. Finally, the exhibit area will include poster session presentations. These features are all intended to create an intellectually engaging conference experience for attendees, offering many opportunities for participants to expand their professional networks and push their thinking in new directions.

When the conference concludes I will look forward to hearing your thoughts on these offerings, and your ideas for future conferences. I am also eager to share in conversations that will emerge here about the state of our field. In today's political climate, feminist voices, ideas, and action offer needed correctives, re-framing public debates that frequently turn on gender myths and assumptions.

Once again, welcome to Cincinnati!

Best wishes,

FRIDAY, JUNE 20 10-1PM

Pre-registered Ticket holders should meet in the hotel lobby at 9:30AM
(If you didn't sign up in advance we encourage you to visit the center on your own.)

NATIONAL UNDERGROUND RAILROAD FREEDOM CENTER

NWSA has arranged for a chartered bus to the Freedom Center
Highlight/Women of Courage Tour at the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center.

The tour will begin with the highlights of the Freedom Center which includes and exhibition presentation and will end with the Women of Courage tour which depicts stories of over 20 women known and unknown in the fight for freedom* (before 1920).

NWSA will provide boxed lunches for the tour group to enjoy at the Freedom Center.

ABOUT THE FREEDOM CENTER

The Freedom Center's physical location in downtown Cincinnati, Ohio, is just a few steps from the banks of the Ohio River, which separated slave from free states in the period of American history when slavery was sanctioned in law and supported as a critical component of the national economy. Our museum tells that story in major exhibits and programs that have attracted hundreds of thousands of visitors since opening in August 2004.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD

During the 1800s, estimates suggest that more than 100,000 enslaved people sought freedom through the Underground Railroad. The Underground Railroad is the symbolic term given to the routes enslaved Black Americans took to gain their freedom as they traveled, often as far as Canada and Mexico. Free Blacks, Whites, Native Americans and other slaves acted as conductors by aiding fugitive slaves to their freedom. This 19th century freedom movement challenged the way Americans viewed slavery and freedom.
FRIDAY JUNE 20 2008
NORTH: 200
7:00 PM-8:30 PM
“SONGVOICES: RESISTING HEGEMONIES”

For centuries, women throughout the world have resisted hegemonies by making difficult choices that not only changed their personal lives, but also changed the lives of women for future generations.

During this concert, Amy Carol Webb, who traces her heritage back to the Native Americans who settled Oklahoma and who believes in raising consciousness while raising the roof; Cincinnati feminist singer/songwriter/activist, Shelley Graff, along with Kathy, Julie, Dorrie, and Karen; and from the soul singer/songwriter, Lee Hoffman, will share songs about women who consciously chose to change the world through resistance.

The intention of the concert is to affirm the many amazing local, regional, national, and international women who not only resisted hegemonies through their choices, but whose courageous, pioneering spirits envisioned a new paradigm for women’s power.

“YOUR NEGRO TOUR GUIDE”

PERFORMANCE BY
KATHY Y. WILSON
7:00PM – 8:30PM PERFORMANCE
8:30PM – 9:00PM TALKBACK

“Your Negro Tour Guide” is a mash-up of rants, nightmares, open letters and quasi-word associations spotlighting the funk of -isms America tries burying alongside the pathologies America assumes belong solely to blacks.

Starring a black woman who does and does not/can and cannot speak for monolithic blackness, it is a multimedia monologue in bursts using slides, music cues and “Hello, My Name is...” tags ripped off revealing with each yank the minutiae of The Big Three: race, gender and class. Until the end when she’s not Your Negro Tour Guide after all.

SATURDAY JUNE 21, 7:00PM - 8:00PM
WOMEN WRITING FOR (A) CHANGE READ-AROUND FOR CREATIVE WRITERS
NORTH: 205

Women Writing for (a) Change, a unique, local feminist organization founded by poet and teacher Mary Pierce Brosmer in 1991, is one of the community groups assisting local planners of the 2008 NWSA Conference in Cincinnati. WWfach has offered writing classes, retreats, and workshops for women and girls for more than a decade, using their unique process of group feedback and mutual support.
OVERVIEW

A BRIEF (AND INCOMPLETE) HISTORY OF THE NWSA WOMEN OF COLOR CAUCUS

Participants in the 2007 NWSA Women of Color Caucus retreat discussed the central role women of color have played in NWSA history and activities, and wanted to establish a record of those contributions. Pat Washington and Nupur Chaudhuri have begun that work here.

The history of the Women of Color Caucus of the National Women’s Studies Association is an inexorable and irreducible part of the history of NWSA. From the Association’s first national conference in 1979 (Lawrence, Kansas)—when the Women of Color Caucus drew its first breath as the “Third World Caucus”—to the landmark 1981 Storrs Conference (“Women Respond to Racism”); to the watershed 1990 Akron Conference where over a hundred women of color and their allies walked out to protest the Association’s entrenched racism; to the “healing” presidencies of Vivien Ng and Betty Harris (1994 and 1997, respectively); to the 2000 Simmons Conference developed and delivered by the Caucus’s advisor/benefactor/champion/mainstay Christina Brinkley; to the 2002 Las Vegas conference where the Women of Color Caucus and the then-newly-constituted Anti White Supremacy Task Force joined forces to agitate for the inclusion of perspectives and contributions of women of color in the Association’s 25th anniversary celebration; down to the present time when the Women of Color Caucus and the Women of Color Leadership Project figure prominently in the Association’s multi-year Ford Foundation capacity-building grant, the Women of Color Caucus has been a driving force within the Association.

The Caucus has benefited from the courage, persistence, and commitment of many “sturdy bridges” of all colors. Several such “bridges” are listed by name in the above highlights of Caucus history. However, there is a long succession of others, leading from the Association’s inaugural conference to the present day, and stretching well into the future.

Nupur Chaudhuri was present at the first national conference, where she recalls “many American women of color and other long time U.S. residents were ‘congratulated’ by their white peers for ‘speaking good English’ or having ‘a good grasp of the subject matter.’” Chaudhuri was elected that year as one of the Coordinating Council members of the fledgling Third World Caucus, and, in this role, she drafted guidelines for a more inclusive 1980 conference in Bloomington, as well as helped set the stage for the ground-breaking Storrs conference on racism in 1981. It was regarding the experience of women of color at this latter conference that Chela Sandoval would subsequently write, “To be ‘Third World’ meant... first, to have been de-centered from any point of power in order to be used as the negative pole against which the dominant powers can then define themselves [and] second, to be working politically to challenge the systems that keep power moving in its current patterns, thus shifting it onto new terrains....”

Sandoval’s assessment of the dialectic between “Third World” women’s status (“de-centered”) and their purpose (“shifting power ... onto new terrains”) captures the essence of what the Women of Color Caucus has been historically and what it strives to be today.

The Women of Color Caucus continues to offer our Association a singular opportunity to look within our own ranks to discover ways to promote broader inclusion of historical, social, cultural, political and economical perspectives of racialized women in the United States (and abroad). We do this in a variety of ways with a variety of supporters and allies. Recent examples include our work with Program Administration and Development to create the Women of Color Leadership Project, our work with the NWSA Journal to develop a cluster of articles by emerging and established women of color scholars, our work with ABAFAZI Journal to fund a women of color student essay award (subsequently expanded to several awards through the generous contributions of donors), our work with the Anti White Supremacy Task Force to present an annual “Stop Dreaming/Keep Working” workshop, and numerous other endeavors.

NWSA can be proud of this history of women of color, allies, and social justice advocates who have openly challenged, critiqued, and moved the Association to live up to its mission.
ABOUT THE WOCLP

The Women of Color Leadership Project is designed to
1. Increase the number of women of color students and faculty within the field of women's studies and women's centers

2. Have an impact on the levels of participation and power by women of color in all levels of the Association, particularly in the Program Administration and Development Committee, the Women's Center's Committee, the Women of Color Caucus, NWSA's governance structure, and in the field of women's studies and women's centers as a whole.

Women of color in women's studies, ethnic studies, or related fields may apply if they aspire to leadership within women's studies, NWSA, and related fields. Applicants may include graduate students, faculty, center staff members, and current program administrators in women's studies and related fields of study who wish to be more involved in center, program or Association leadership.

NWSA Conference 2008
NWSA GOVERNANCE STRUCTURE

NWSA GOVERNANCE / CONFERENCE INFORMATION

The annual conference is NWSA’s largest programmatic initiative. Many conference responsibilities rest with elected officers and governing council members, committee chairs and members, and other volunteers from various constituencies within NWSA. The Association invites its members to volunteer for leadership positions - for committee membership, to strengthen regional Associations, and to join and energize sub-groups within NWSA. NWSA is the leading national organization dedicated to advancing feminist education, scholarship, service, and community activism: you can play a part in shaping its future.

NWSA is a 501(c)3 organization as classified by the IRS. The Association is prohibited from engaging in political activities in order to maintain its tax-exempt non-profit status. While it is far from certain that NWSA members and the IRS would agree on the meaning of the phrase “political activity,” NWSA must restrict its external advocacy or actions to those that clearly fall within the rubric of its educational mission. Although NWSA itself may be prohibited from engaging in political activity, this does not restrict the speech or action of NWSA’s membership. Persons or groups wishing to enlist the advocacy of NWSA’s membership may circulate petitions at the conference and/or may purchase mailing labels from the national office in order to communicate directly with members. Persons or groups outside of NWSA may not solicit conference attendees for financial support.

THE NWSA MISSION AND GOVERNING COUNCIL

The National Women’s Studies Association mission statement states that the organization leads the field of women’s studies in educational and social transformation.

This is a large and even global mission that can only be realized when members from a variety of experiences, backgrounds, and perspectives volunteer to serve the Association and the women’s studies community in all its diversity. The current officers and members of the Governing Council welcome suggestions and offers to help with the work of advancing the Association’s mission.

MEMBERSHIP INFORMATION

Membership in the National Women’s Studies Association is open to anyone interested in promoting women’s studies education in the community, schools, colleges and universities. 2008 membership dues range from $40 for students, and then a sliding scale ranging from $55 to $190 for standard individual membership. Institutional membership ranges on a sliding scale from $175 to $500.

NWSA GOVERNANCE STRUCTURE

The Governing Council (GC) serves as the Corporate Board of Directors of NWSA. The GC consists of five officers who shall be elected by the general membership, standing committee chairs elected by the general membership, seven members of the Delegate Assembly Steering Committee, and the executive director, the editor of the NWSA Journal, the editor of NWSAction, and the past president, who are ex-officio, non-voting members. The GC meets twice a year, in January and in June—both before and after the conference—to oversee the Association’s finances and insure that NWSA programs are compatible with its mission and strategic plan. The executive committee, comprised of elected officers of NWSA, functions on behalf of the GC between the June and January meetings.

The purpose of the Membership Assembly is to provide all members with an opportunity to identify and discuss issues of import to the operation and mission of NWSA, and to communicate issues of concern to the Delegate Assembly and Governing Council. The Membership Assembly will consider and vote upon proposed recommendations directed towards fostering and improving the organization.

Under the NWSA constitution, the Delegate Assembly shall be the principal policy-making body of NWSA.

REGIONAL WOMEN’S STUDIES ASSOCIATIONS

Regional women’s studies associations exist to strengthen networks among the approximately 650 women’s studies programs, departments, women’s centers and their affiliated community organizations. At the regional sessions you will elect your regional representative who goes to the Delegate Assembly and also have an opportunity to network with neighboring regional colleagues, students and activists.
CONSTITUENCY GROUPS

Constituency groups have a long history in NWSA, beginning with the founding conference in 1977; they reflect the desire of some NWSA members to affiliate in subgroups, and highlight our diversity of identities.

CAUCUSES designate groups that are under-represented within society or NWSA as an organization. NWSA has acted from the beginning on the belief that members whose identities, voices, and points of view may be numerically under-represented within NWSA might not find an organizational base or be able to make themselves heard without caucus representation.

TASK FORCES are oriented toward an issue or problem relevant to the policies and principles of NWSA and women's studies that can be solved through action. Task Forces, however, do not require representation within the governance structure, and can accomplish their projects without its intervention.

INTEREST GROUPS are oriented toward those who wish to meet around a common scholarly interest. Area Interest Groups accomplish their goals primarily through the development of regular conference programming.

SPECIFIC ETHICAL STANDARDS AND CODE OF CONDUCT

Nondiscrimination

NWSA members/staff may not engage in discrimination in the organization based on age; gender; race; ethnicity; national origin; religion; sexual orientation; disability; health conditions; marital, domestic, or parental status; or any other applicable basis proscribed by law.

Harassment

NWSA members/staff may not engage in harassment of any person, including members, supervisors, or employees. Harassment occurs when someone's actions or words, based on the relevant grounds (e.g., gender, race, gender identity and expression, height, weight, and sexuality), are unwelcome and violate another person's dignity or create an environment that is intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating, or offensive.

Sexual harassment may include unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature if that behavior negatively affects or interferes with an individual's participation in the organization, and/or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Harassment on the basis of race, color, or national origin that negatively affects or interferes with an individual's participation in the organization, and/or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Non-exploitation

(a) Whether for personal, economic, or professional advantage, NWSA members/staff may not exploit persons over whom they work within the organization;

(b) NWSA members/staff may not directly supervise or exercise evaluative authority over any person with whom they have a sexual relationship, including students, supervisors, or employees within the context of NWSA work.

Electronic Communication

The following guidelines should be followed when engaging in electronic communication.

1) NWSA listservs should be used for NWSA-related business only.

2) Do not send sexually explicit, offensive, demeaning, insulting or intimidating e-communications, ethnic or racial slurs, or anything that harasses or disparages others.

3) No electronic mail may be sent that is abusive or threatens the safety of a person or persons.

4) Do not send messages to people who don’t need to receive them.

5) Be thoughtful about clipping and pasting others' messages in those you send.

6) Do not forward e-mail sent to you to others without the original author's permission.

7) If you receive a message sent to a list of people, do not respond needlessly to the entire list.

8) Use a professional tone in your messages.

9) Be careful when using sarcasm and humor. Your “joke” could be misunderstood.

CREATIVE WRITING SERIES

CREATIVE WRITING SERIES #1 (POETRY)
FRI, JUNE 20 - 9:45AM - 11:00AM
LOCATION: SOUTH / 237

HAVE YOU SEEN HER?
Olivia Ayes (UMSL)
This poetry sample aims to reveal an often silenced perspective of a young queer, immigrant woman. Through continuous assessment of the hegemonies of influencing cultures and her own failures, the poet presents significant moments of lucidity, which are intangible at best. She desires to move beyond displacement, but seems to locate solace only in imagination.

BREAKING BREAD WITH STRANGE SISTERS
Colleen Beth McKee (University of Missouri-St. Louis)
Most of these poems are from a poetry chapbook published by a women's press. The poems center on the pleasures of food and sex, and they subvert dominant cultural narratives about what nourishes the body: The sex is often not heterosexual; food does not always comfort; and in a shifting urban world, women find communities in unexpected ways, breaking bread with the unlikeliest of sisters.

FROM "CITIES OF MATHEMATICS AND DESIRE:" A POETRY PERFORMANCE
Judith Emlyn Johnson (13th Moon Press)
The theme of "Cities of Mathematics and Desire" is our responsibility for each other and for the ecosphere. My point of departure is the 1988 tragedy in which the population of a village in the Andes first worshipped and then ingested abandoned radioactive medical waste. I then weave together contemporary chaos theory, gallows humor, surreal imagery, nonlinear and cinematic narrative, pop cultural figures such as King Kong, and two global poets (Anna Akhmatova ad Guillaume Apollinaire) to show how this supposedly distant tragedy arose in those patriarchal intellectual and social structures that ignore our mutual embeddedness in each other's lives.

GENDER IDENTITY IN EVERYDAY PERFORMANCE
Kimberly Dark (California State San Marcos)
These performance poems explore the social construction of gender -- as it is performed in the humorous and challenging everyday. These poems use auto ethnography to create a literary, entertaining social analysis.

LOVE AFTER 911 & OTHER WRITING
Melanie Kaye Kantrowitz
I write poems, fiction, essays, and things I think of as blurts (maybe prose poems). I write the poems and blurts in explosions, under pressure. Almost everything I write explores color, gender, power, resistance, and empire. My leading edge is voice (Brooklyn Jewish). Last year I read two of my poems ("Bodies" and "10 reasons why we need a new war") in a Washington DC church in preparation for mass anti-war civil disobedience. That's my idea of wholeness.

POETIC RESISTANCE: MAKING A DENT IN THE HEGEMONIC ARMOR
Pramila Venkateswaran (Nassau Community College)
Can poetry be a site of resistance? Will poetry change things? Poetry may perhaps not overturn governments, but history shows that it certainly speaks for the voiceless; it has always spoken loudly against all hegemonies. The women in my poems pose unsettling questions about racism, colonization, nuclear proliferation, war, refugee crises, the choice of violence over diplomacy, and at the same time point the way to justice and solidarity that can achieve a gradual shift in the existing order. Ultimately, activist poetry is far more powerful than any bomb and splits open the ironies of oppression.

CREATIVE WRITING SERIES #2 (POETRY)
FRI, JUNE 20 - 1:30PM - 2:45PM
LOCATION: LEGENDS, SOUTH / 237

C. TAYLOR: ONE WOMAN, TWO COUNTRIES
Capuchina Bianka Taylor (University of Missouri-St. Louis)
The poet, originally from Germany but brought up in the Midwest, is filled with contradictions. Her concerns in her work deal mainly with identity related to being biracial in world that lets you circle only one box or "other" and validating African American culture in the literary world. She attempts to erase the "exotic" by normalizing African American culture to the dominant, European American readership prominent in the literary world.

IMPOSSIBLE BODY: I SING THE BODY ANDROGYNOUS
Stacey Waite (University of Pittsburgh)
This poetry performance hopes to bring the essential conversations between queer theory and queer lives to the forefront of our collective minds. The poems themselves explore the gendered spaces in which we live (or do not live) while the poet attempts to re-invent the poetry reading itself. The poems are both lyrical and narrative, both subtle song and charged spoken word. This collection of poems re-imagines and re-defines the ways we think about gender as it moves us through the territory of an androgynous life.

MIDDLE EAST MEETS MIDDLE WEST: A WOMAN'S STRUGGLE WITH IDENTITY, DISPLACEMENT AND YEARNING FOR THE HOMELAND
Rewa Zeinati Choueiri
Originally Lebanese, this poet has moved to the Midwest five years ago. Her poems lament her 'awayness' and explore identity in a world that increasingly marginalizes Arab roots. She celebrates what she remembers as beautiful in her homeland, without being naive about the reality of corrupt governments and false initiations of war. She includes romantic notions of resistance and revolution, war, refugee crises, the choice of violence over diplomacy, and at the same time point the way to justice and solidarity that can achieve a gradual shift in the existing order. Ultimately, activist poetry is far more powerful than any bomb and splits open the ironies of oppression.
QUALITATIVE METHODS
Erika Faith Feigenbaum

In these poems, the author deals with notions of vulnerability at the intersections of experience, examining the impact of sex, class, sexuality, and other areas from varied perspectives. At their core, the poems call attention to often invisible themes within the cultural boundaries of the mainstream, positioning the reader amidst circumstances that problematize the subjects through a feminist lens.

RANDOM PORTRAITS: PLACE AND IDENTITY THROUGH THE LENS OF A POOR WHITE GIRL
Jaime RebekaWood

Moving from Oklahoma to Kansas, Louisiana to Colorado, and finally ending up in Missouri, I have spent my life looking at place as a way to redefine myself. Much of my poetry is a collection of "Random Portraits" that illustrates the volatile nature of place and identity.

CREATIVE WRITING SERIES #3 (POETRY)
SAT, JUNE 21 • 9:45AM - 11:00AM

HEAT'S HALF LIFE
Agatha Beins (Rutgers University)

In this poetry selection I grapple with chaos, with the ways that bodies — human and otherwise — exceed our grasp and force us to question our realities and our desires. These poems take up various bodies, ask how they fit and do not fit into space, what the impressions they make, and what traces they leave in their absence.

INSIDE/OUTSIDE: WOMEN'S VOICES
Barbara Wade

This collection of poetry creates a variety of voices to explore the inner lives of women and intersections with others. Through metaphor, imagery, and humor, it touches on important aspects of women's lives, including mother/daughter relations, maintaining independence and spiritedness while aging, self-realization, treatment within the health care system, and dieting fads.

KINSWOMEN: POEMS IN RELATION
Sheila Hassell Hughes (University of Dayton)

These poems address the struggles of women in my family—with depression, poverty, alcoholism, abortion, teen pregnancy, child abandonment, sexual abuse, adoption and foster care, widowhood, senility, natural disaster, and the death of a child—and their remarkable reservoirs of strength and compassion. As a sister, writer, and feminist I feel compelled to try to respond, to "answer" the call of both their pain and their power as women and to make meaning out of it for my own life and vision. The poems are laments, inquiries, and prayers of sorts — all injected with a degree of resilient humor.

POSTCARD ON PARCHMENT
Christine Stewart-Nunez

Emerging from the intersections of identity, place, and class, these poems from Postcard on Parchment (winner of the 2007 ABZ First Book Prize) focus on the experiences of a young American woman living in Turkey. In form and impulse, the poems take up questions of embodiment: In what ways do culture and gender map themselves on the flesh? Written with attention to representation, the author confronts writing in a culture not her own by drawing attention to the speaker's subjectivity, complicating the rigidity of key themes, and confronting tensions between lived truth(s) and invented truth(s).

WHAT IS SPOKEN IS NO LONGER UNSPEAKABLE
Tema Jon Okun (Ubuntu), Kriti Sharma (Ubuntu), Alexis Pauline Gumbs (Ubuntu), Serena Pauline Sebring (Ubuntu), Emily Chavez (Ubuntu)

An interactive participatory poetry slam based on our experience as a collective of women who live and write our constant reflection about surviving under empire as feminists, women of color, queer sexual deviants, academics, white women, community activists, survivors, young old women. We have deep, angry, joyful, tentative, complex, necessary experience creating space for loving each other into saying what we normally can't. We will facilitate a process involving a writing prompt, time for writing in response to the prompt, deep listening to what has been written, and then talking about it, slowly and thoughtfully.

YOUR BODY IS A BORDERLAND
Lauren R. Espinoza (University of Texas Pan-American)

It's 2002 and John Mayer has just released "Your Body is a Borderland." His record career is down the tubes, and he's been dropped from his record label. If only. Instead, he released "Your Body is a Wonderland" and now he's famous. It's 2007 and "Your Body is a Borderland" is a collection of poems designed to bring forth the idea that the Borderland is a place where pluralities can exist as one. Mexican and American — always separate but never equivalent.

CREATIVE WRITING SERIES #4 (PROSE)
SAT, JUNE 21 • 11:15AM - 12:30PM
LOCATION: NORTH / 202

I AM NOT MY HAIR: POLITICAL SHEROES IN THE CROSSFIRE
Stephane NA Dunn

This creative nonfiction piece, a mix of autobiographical notes and intensive cultural critique, interrogates the play of race and gender in popular, media representations of black female political identity. "I Am Not My Hair: Political Sheroes in the Crossfire" engages recent incidents such as the infamous Imus scandal, and the public imagery and personas of Shirley Chisholm and that of recent political sisters like Cynthia McKinney. It ultimately delves into the troubling sexist and racist dynamics implicit in how they have been publicly 'read' and addresses that all important question: What does hair have to do with it all?
SMALL TOWN MADNESS: WOMEN ON THE MARGINS
Barbara Horn (Nassau Community College)

Reading from her work in progress (a memoir entitled "Picture This: From Midwestern Farm to East Village"), this creative non-fiction writer will concentrate on how small town American life, especially in the 1950's and 1960's, was not only dying, it was also "killing" its citizens, particularly the elderly, the infirm, the mentally challenged. Often invisible, usually ignored, and always demeaned, old women and women of color lived in the shadows. The writer, looking back when she was an observant girl, attempts to bring these marginalized females to the forefront.

VERA, FROM LUNAR ECLIPSE
Genevieve Carminati (Montgomery College)

"Vera" is from a collection-in-progress of short stories about women, called Lunar Eclipse. The story examines the importance of woman-to-woman friendships, even those that we might accept reluctantly, and might believe incorrectly, as the title character does, are more for the benefit of the other woman. Vera, a would-be writer struggling for self-hood and control, turns her frustration and anger against her longtime friend Molly, a painter whose accomplishments and relationships (especially with the staunch Julia) Vera belittles and criticizes. But at Molly's latest exhibit, why is Vera so drawn to the paintings and their creator?

XAVIER UNIVERSITY EXHIBITOR BOOTH

The Xavier University Women's Center is pleased to offer the 1000 PeaceWomen Across the Globe exhibit at the 2008 NWSA conference. The exhibit emerged from the 1000 Women for the Nobel Peace Prize 2005 project, and serves as a powerful educational tool showcasing the complexity of peace and the women involved in peace movements.

The exhibit consists of 1000 postcard sized paper plaques that present an image and information about a different peace woman. Portions of the 1000 PeaceWomen Across the Globe exhibit can be viewed at the Xavier University booth sponsored by the College of Social Sciences, Health, and Education.

ABOUT THE EXHIBIT

From the early days of the 1000 Women for the Nobel Peace Prize 2005 project we looked for ways to reach out to the public, to quietly but powerfully put across an understanding of peace that is comprehensive and based on human security, and to project the faces and voices of peacewomen.

The travelling exhibition has been one of our most effective tools for achieving these aims.

FILM/VIDEO DESCRIPTIONS

DOIN' IT: SEX, DISABILITY AND VIDEOTAPE

By The Empowered Fe FePes and Beyond Media Education

Friday 2:15 pm

A daring and humorous investigation into the uncharted intersection between disability and sexuality. The Empowered Fe FePes educate themselves from many angles by talking with activists, educators, and scholars, challenging the notion that people with disabilities are not fully sexual human beings. They learn that sex for people with disabilities is affected by a broad range of issues, from health care to social policy to media representation; that they might be more prone to domestic violence; which echoes even today in widespread attempts to control the sexuality of people with disabilities through medical practices. Beyond Media Education, 2007, 35 min.

DREAM WORLDS 3

By Sut Jholly

Friday 5:00 pm

Examines the stories contemporary music videos tell about girls and women, and encourages viewers to consider how these narratives shape individual and cultural attitudes about sexuality. Illustrated with hundreds of up-to-date images, Dream Worlds 3 offers a unique and powerful tool for understanding both the continuing influence of music videos and how pop culture more generally filters the identities of young men and women through a dangerously narrow set of myths about sexuality and gender. In doing so, it inspires viewers to reflect critically on images that they might otherwise take for granted. Media Education Foundation, 2007, 55 min.
DREAMING LHASA
By Ritu Sarin and Tenzing Sonam
Friday 7:15 pm
The first internationally recognized feature film by a Tibetan, Dreaming Lhasa explores the contemporary reality of Tibetans. The story resonates beyond the Tibetan experience, touching upon larger questions of cultural identity, dislocation and loss that are very much a part of today's post-modern world. The film's main character, Karma, is a Tibetan filmmaker from New York who goes to the Dalai Lama's exile headquarters in northern India, to make a documentary about former political prisoners who have escaped from Tibet. It is here she falls in love and takes a journey into Tibet's fractured past and a voyage of self discovery. First Run/Icarus Films, 2005, 90 min.

ENEMIES OF HAPPINESS
By Eva Mulvad and Anja Al-Erhayem
Individual Screening
In September 2005, Afghanistan held its first parliamentary elections in 35 years. Among the candidates for 249 assembly seats was Malai Joya, a courageous, controversial 27-year-old woman who ignited outrage among hard-liners when she spoke out against corrupt warlords at the Grand Council of tribal elders in 2003. Enemies of Happiness is a revelatory portrait of this extraordinary freedom fighter and the way she won the hearts of voters, as well as a snapshot of life and politics in war-torn Afghanistan. Women Make Movies, 2006, 59 min.

ENRAGED BY A PICTURE
By Zanele Muholi
Individual Screening
A photographer, Muholi is celebrating her exhibition in Johannesburg. Efficiently controversial, the exhibition causes a stir and provokes an outcry on a subject that is particularly taboo: being black and, in this case, being lesbian. Forthright and beautifully shot, each monochrome photo captures the present reality of the photographer's subjects—the daily discomfort, double lives, abuse and hatred. The photographs present a window into their world. This absorbing documentary explores that world's reality. Frameline, 2005, 14 min.

FLESH
By Tami Wilson
Individual Screening
This idiosyncratic documentary looks at women and meat in a society obsessed with flesh. This film introduces a motley crew of women with wildly differing relationships to meat—an organic cattle rancher; a manager for a meat-packing plant; a hunting activist; a Vietnamese-Canadian "meat-lover"; a 14-year-old vegetarian; and a college student/Hooters waitress who admits to feeling like a "stuffed sausage" in her tight uniform. FLESH also engages the political side of meat eating through interviews with Carol Adams, author of The Sexual Politics of Meat. Adams outlines how women and animals are objectified in popular culture and packaged for consumption by men. Moving Images Distribution, 2006, 43 min.

FTF: FEMALE TO FEMME
By Kami Chisholm and Elizabeth Stark
Friday 10:00 am
This film imagines a world in which the journey toward femme was understood to be as radical as journeys to claim and inhabit other queer bodies. Envisioning more than it documents, this documentary celebrates dyke femme identities, combining farce and seduction with analysis and personal history. For years, femmes have forged community and created space for themselves out of edgy performance and authentic parody. FfF recognizes these strategies and builds them into an unforgettable, sexy, funny and moving film. Frameline, 2006, 48 min.

GOD SLEEPS IN RWANDA
By Kimberlee Acquaro and Stacy Sherman
Individual Screening
The 1994 Rwandan Genocide left the country nearly 70% female handing Rwanda's women an extraordinary burden and an unprecedented opportunity. An inspiring story of loss and redemption God Sleeps in Rwanda captures the spirit of five courageous women as they rebuild their lives, redefining women's roles in Rwandan society and bringing hope to a wounded nation. Women Make Movies, 2004, 28 min.

GRANNY D GOES TO WASHINGTON
By Ailidra Solday
Individual Screening
This film chronicles the extraordinary march across the U.S. by political activist, Doris Haddock. Passionate about democracy, she walked from California to Washington D.C. to dramatize the need to restore representative government in America and reduce the role of special interest money in politics. The film records her travels and conveys the infectious enthusiasm Granny D. inspired in the people she met. With her participatory democracy, this great-grandmother stands up as a role model of commitment and passionate engagement for people of all ages. Bullfrog Films, 2006, 27 min.

HAND ON THE PULSE
By Joyce Warshow
Friday 1:15 pm
Using interviews, photos and archival footage, Hand on the Pulse is the poignant story of Joan Nestle, political and sexual "bad girl." This film traces Joan's life; finding her community in Greenwich Village in the 1950's, celebrating the body in her writings and in her public readings in her black slip, having Lesbian archives in her home for 25 years, teaching students from colonized backgrounds, participating in the civil rights movement as a freedom rider, becoming a feminist, and helping to forge a new lesbian and gay consciousness through grass roots organizing. Now in her 60’s, Joan continues to celebrate the body as an aging woman and as a woman with cancer. Frameline, 2002, 52 min.

HAVE YOU HEARD FROM JOHANNESBURG?: APARTHEID AND THE CLUB OF THE WEST
By Connie Field

Individual Screening
This film shows how a nation-wide campaign of civil disobedience, campus protest and finally legislative action, spearheaded by African American leaders spawned by the Civil Rights Movement, including many notable women such as Adwoa Dunn-Mouton and Rosa Parks, reversed American foreign policy toward South Africa. It provides an aspiring civics lesson in how a grassroots movement can place an issue onto the national agenda, force its coverage by the mainstream media and eventually triumph over the most powerful and entrenched institutions in our society - corporations, the universities and even the federal government. California Newsreel, 2007, 89 min.

INDEPENDENT INTERVENTION: BREAKING SILENCE
By Tonje Hessen Schei and David Bee

Individual Screening
Independent Intervention is an award-winning documentary about United States media coverage of the conflict in Iraq. Focusing on human costs of war, it contrasts corporate-controlled media coverage of the invasion of Iraq with independent media reports of the brutal realities on the ground. The film investigates issues and systems that govern today's information flow and shows how these systems of control reveal themselves during times of political turmoil and war. Bullfrog Films, 2006, 75 min.

JUDITH BUTLER: PHILOSOPHICAL ENCOUNTERS OF THE THIRD KIND
By Paule Zadjermann

Friday 11:00 am
This film is an up-close and personal encounter with Judith Butler, an educator, author and one of the world's most influential contemporary thinkers in fields such as continental philosophy, literary theory, feminist and queer theory, and cultural politics. In the film, Butler covers a wide range of subjects, broaching not only controversial gender issues - including transsexuality and intersexuality - but also 20th century Jewish philosophy, AIDS activism, criticisms of state power and violence, gay marriage, and anti-Zionism. First Run/Icarus Films, 2006, 52 min.

LAS MUJERES DE LA CAUCUS CHICANA
By Linda Garcia Merchant

Friday 12:00 pm
A documentary that recounts the turning points of six women who answered the call to action and came together at the 1977 National Women’s Conference in Houston. These women helped shape national policy for women and were founding members of recognized organizations such as the Raza Unida Party, the Women’s Action Program, the National Women’s Political Caucus and International Women’s Year. Voces primeras, LLC, 2007, 25 min.

MAMA AWETHU!
By Bethany Yarrow

Friday 3:00 pm
Mama Awethu! follows the day-to-day lives of five black South African women in the townships around Cape Town, revealing the inhuman legacy of the apartheid system. Evelyn, once an African National Congress branch secretary, lives in a squatter location called Philippi and works as a cleaning woman. Iris, also from Philippi, is a member of the ANC Women’s League and involved in community politics. Sheila, a resident of Khayalethesha, is a committed activist; Dinah is new to politics and Nopopi focuses on issues affecting women. These inspiring voices are a call to empowerment for all women and a song about life and the courage to live. First Run/Icarus Films, 1993, 53 min.

MIRRORS OF PRIVILEGE: MAKING WHITENESS VISIBLE
By Shakti Butler

Friday 4:00 pm
Mirrors of Privilege: Making Whiteness Visible features the experience of white women and men who have worked to gain insight into what it means to challenge notions of racism and white supremacy in the United States. They reveal what is often required to expose and move beyond the denial, defensiveness, guilt, fear and shame that helps keep systemic racism in place. The film’s subjects model some of the skills and awareness needed to make effective commitments towards building racial equality and justice. World Trust Educational Services, Inc., 2006, 50 min.

MY SELF/MY STORY
By Hiroko Hara

Individual Screening
My Self/My Story explores what it means to be an Asian woman and a woman of color in the West. Through the eyes and voice of the narrator who is a transnational woman constantly shifting across boundaries, a counter-hegemonic view resisting the dominant discourse is delineated. The film asserts the importance of creating an alternative space where multiple languages and modes of living across boundaries are acknowledged and thereby diverse voices are heard. Hiroko Hara, 2007, 3 min.
NOVELA, NOVELA
By Liz Miller
Friday 12:35 pm
Novela, Novela is the story of how a group of Nicaraguan feminists have fused human rights with popular culture to create what has become Nicaragua’s most popular telenovela, “Sexto Sentido.” This film looks at how such a ground-breaking series made it to the air in Nicaragua, and how the creators, writers, actors, and viewers have grappled with controversial themes like domestic violence and homophobia in this impoverished country so heavily influenced by the Catholic Church. Frameline, 2002, 30 min.

OF FATWAS & BEAUTY QUEENS
By Carol Off and Alex Shprintsen
Friday 9:00 am
Reporter Carol Off tells the story of 21-year-old Isioma Daniel, who was enjoying her first job as a journalist when a single sentence spun her life and country into chaos. Nigeria was hosting the Miss World pageant and Daniel was assigned to cover it. But a few words of one article—which would be considered heresy by Nigeria’s mullahs—sparked riots that turned Muslims against Christians in bloody rampages that killed hundreds of people and destroyed dozens of villages. Before the dust settled, the pageant had been cancelled, the beauty queens had fled, and Daniel had escaped into exile with a "fatwa" issued against her life. Filmmaker Library, Inc., 2005, 48 min.

ONE IN 2000
By Ajae Clearway
Individual Screening
Each year an estimated one in two thousand babies are born with anatomy that doesn’t clearly mark them as either male or female. This documentary demystifies the issue of sexual difference through intimate and sympathetic profiles of people born with intersex conditions who are living “ordinary” and productive lives. At a time when five babies a day in the U.S. are having “gender reassignment” surgery, it argues that there is little evidence that such surgery is beneficial to the child. Fanlight Productions, 2006, 26 min.

OUR HOUSE
By Meema Spadola
Individual Screening
Our House is a ground-breaking documentary that explores what it’s like to grow up with gay or lesbian parents. Traveling to urban, rural and suburban communities in Arizona, Arkansas, New Jersey and New York, Our House director Meema Spadola (the daughter of a lesbian mom) profiles the sons and daughters of five families—African American, Latino and white; Mormon, Christian and Jewish—who illustrate some of the diversity of America’s gay and lesbian families. First Run/Icarus Films, 2000, 56 min.

RUNNING IN HIGH HEELS
By Maryann Breschard
Individual Screening
This film explores various aspects of politics, feminism, fashion and tradition. By following the political campaign of an engaging but inexperienced 29-year-old woman, it poses a challenging question: Should feminists vote for women, regardless of the candidates’ politics? Interwoven throughout the film are a chorus of powerful women from the left and right of American politics. 52 Women Films, 2006, 50 min.

SHE RHYMES LIKE A GIRL
By JT Takagi
Individual Screening
Toni Blackman and the Freestyle Union are challenging the male-dominated world of hip hop and empowering women to speak their minds in freestyle workshops. This music video/documentary hopes to promote a movement of female MCs. Third World Newsreel, 2005, 7 min.

SISTERS IN LAW
By Kim Longinotto and Florence Ayisi
Friday 9:00 pm
A fascinating and often hilarious look at the work of one small courthouse in Cameroon where two young women determined to change a village are making progress that could change the world. The tough-minded state prosecutor Vera Ngassa and Court President Beatrice Ntuba are working to help women in their Muslim village to find the courage to fight often-difficult cases of abuse, despite pressures from family and their community to remain silent. With fierce compassion, they dispense wisdom, wisecracks and justice in fair measure—handing down stiff sentences to those convicted. Women Make Movies, 2005, 104 min.

STILL WAITING: LIFE AFTER KATRINA
By Ginny Martin & Katherine E. Browne
Friday 6:05 pm
This film takes place in the post-Katrina world of three African American women who grew up in the New Orleans area and together anchor an extended family of 155 people. The group’s well-knotted bonds of love and reciprocity function like an emotional ecosystem, capable, it seems, of absorbing the profound betrayal of nature and the system. But as the story of their evacuation to Dallas gives way to the story of their return to the bayou, the unexpected difficulties they face, the hopes of reclaiming life as it once existed look increasingly remote. Ginny Martin and Kate Brown Production, 2007, 58 min.
SWORN VIRGINS
By Elvira Dones
Individual Screening
In a mountainous area of Albania, an ancestral code of laws is observed to this day - place women in the bottom rung of society. It dictates that "a woman is a sack, made to endure." But there is a loophole. The ancient laws allowed certain women known as "Sworn Virgins" to take an oath in front of their clan, announcing their intention to remain virgins. This fascinating film reports on several unusual Albanian women who dress, act, talk, drink, shoot and are respected as real men. The villagers in this area simply accept the fact that some women want to live like men because they like their freedom. Filmakers Library, 2007, 51 min.

THE WOMEN'S KINGDOM
By Xiaoli Zhou
Individual Screening
A journey into the heart of The Women's Kingdom discovers a society of powerful women whose future is on the brink of change. In recent years, the Chinese have marketed the beautiful Lugu Lake region as a tourist destination. While tourism has brought wealth and 21st century conveniences to this remote area, it has also introduced difficult challenges to the Mosuo culture - from pollution in the lake, to the establishment of brothels, to mainstream ideas about women, beauty, and family. Women Make Movies, 2006, 22 min.

TWO MONTHS TO HOME
By Janice Ahn
Individual Screening
Samira Rahman is an Afghan mother who narrowly escaped death at the hands of the Taliban just before September 11, 2001. Upon arrival in the United States, she is unduly held in a makeshift detention center. After two months she is released and allowed to remain in New York. Samira learns a hard lesson about life in the United States, the price of immigration, and the importance of finding strength in herself. Third World Newsreel, 2006, 8 min.
WOMEN’S CENTER PRE-CONFERENCE
Thursday, June 19, 2008

ABOUT THE WOMEN’S CENTERS COMMITTEE

Women’s Centers have representation on the NWSA Governing Council as a standing committee. This is more than a symbolic recognition of the important role that women’s centers play in feminist education.

NWSA recognizes that “women’s studies” is broader than what happens in the classroom. NWSA acknowledges women’s centers as chief out-of-class feminist educators and encourages participation in the national organization.

Campus-based women’s centers have a long history of working together with women’s studies to transform the curriculum, the campus environment, and society at large.

The Women’s Centers Committee of NWSA provides an opportunity for women’s center directors, staff and others to gather and share information, ideas, challenges, successes and support. The Women’s Centers Committee sponsors an annual pre-conference event as well as sessions during the NWSA annual conference.

008. PRESENTATION

AN INSIDER’S JOB: DEVELOPING LEADERSHIP/TRANSFORMING INSTITUTIONS
North: 201

This session addresses opportunities and challenges for women (and some men) who are in, or aspiring to, leadership positions in higher education today. It explores questions suggested by the pre-conference theme Women’s Centers within the Institution: Resisting Hegemonies. The purpose of the session is to foster leadership development specifically for women’s center professionals, and it pursues this goal by focusing on the importance of developing a structural analysis of the institution while strategically engaging in institutional processes and systems.

022. PRESENTATION

STARTING FROM SCRATCH: BUILDING A NEW WOMEN’S CENTER
North, 202

This session will focus on the practical and real politics involved in starting a new women’s center. Based on my experience of starting two new centers. I will provide useful information to seasoned center staff, new center staff, and aspiring center staff. I will include discussion of best practices and potential challenges.

"I HATE MY BODY!": ADDRESSING BODY DISSATISFACTION AMONG COLLEGE WOMEN
North: 203

A majority of women are dissatisfied with their bodies, which can negatively affect their academic success and well-being. Women’s centers can be instrumental in raising awareness and generating solutions. This workshop will briefly review current research, discuss programming and facilitate discussion on ways we can effectively challenge this growing trend.

024. PANEL
"INSIDE OUT: WOMEN, PRISON AND PERFORMANCE"
NORTH, 204

This panel would provide Women's Centers and Women's and Gender Studies academics with a guide on how to develop a program grounded on community based learning with students and inmates. Inside Out is a course that takes students to the nearest prison to work with the inmates on a performance that includes both students and inmates. We will talk about our experiences within the class setting from the perspective of professors and students inside and outside the prison. The panel would also include views of the various performances that have taken place inside the prison.

026. ROUNDTABLE
EXAMINING OUR EFFORTS NORTH, 204

This roundtable will address career paths to and from women's centers. While many current women's center professionals "fell into" women's center work without having intentionally chosen a women's center career, among our students and successors, a growing number aspire to women's center positions and are taking steps to get there. Many current and future women's center professionals may be looking to move "up" in the administrative ranks. Unlike faculty and other staff positions, however, the path to promotion is not always clear. This roundtable will seek to open the discussion of career paths to and from women's centers.

WOMEN'S CENTERS PROVIDING H.O.P.E. THROUGH MENTORING
North, 203

This workshop will focus on the strategies used in implementing a mentoring program at a local high school with the focus on senior female students. Curriculum development, global civic engagement, collaborative partnerships, available financial resources, peer group mentoring and potential roadblocks will be discussed. How can Women's Centers enhance mentorship to influence the lives of young women will be explored.

028. WORKSHOP
ARE FEMINIST PRINCIPLES BEING APPLIED IN OUR CENTERS?: EXAMINING OUR EFFORTS NORTH, 204

Through an examination of feminist models of leadership and the CAS Standards for Women Student Programs and Services, this experiential workshop will lead participants through a self-examination of their Center structure, goals and leadership in order to evaluate how feminist principles are being enacted. What is needed to lead contemporary Women's Centers? How is Center staff being mentored for advancement? How are feminist principles used in your Center? How inclusive is your Center? This workshop will provide an opportunity to develop effective, innovative and creative strategies for the future and to define and perhaps, re-imagine feminist leadership.

WHITE PRIVILEGE IN WOMEN/GENDER CENTERS' WORK
North: 204

The NWSA Women's Centers Committee has had a long-standing commitment to including conversations and sharing of best practices regarding white privilege in women's centers' work as an integral component of our pre-conference. This conversation, facilitated by one or more women's center staff, will provide space for continuing this important conversation.

030. PANEL
STRATEGIC DIVERSITY PLANNING FOR WOMEN'S CENTERS
North: 201

In this session we will explore the value of diversity strategic plans for women's centers, what is included, and how to write a plan. We will devote particular attention to developing a strategic planning process that is inclusive, strengthens internal and external partnerships and alliances, and lays the groundwork for successful implementation of the plan.

Presenter: Michelle Meyers, Meyers & Munafo, LLC

INVESTING IN WOMEN'S CENTER WORK: THE THREATENING VIOLENCE PROTEST
North, 202

This workshop will explore the dissonance that can arise in our work in women's centers and women's studies programs around a dual set of responsibilities that are often in conflict: to represent the institution as well as to support student voices and teach critical thinking toward social change. While tenured faculty may enjoy a little more freedom of expression than administrators in their support of students' political activities, what does it mean when "agents of the institution" engage with students in their activism; teach it; and/or create it?

033. WORKSHOP
THE DILEMMA OF THE MEDIEVAL MENTOR
North: 203

This workshop will focus on the strategies used in implementing a mentoring program at a local high school with the focus on senior female students. Curriculum development, global civic engagement, collaborative partnerships, available financial resources, peer group mentoring and potential roadblocks will be discussed. How can Women's Centers enhance mentorship to influence the lives of young women will be explored.

Amber L. Vlasnik, Wright State University
Moderator: Brenda Bethman, University of Missouri-Kansas City

036. PANEL
WHITE PRIVILEGE IN WOMEN/GENDER CENTERS' WORK
North: 204

The NWSA Women's Centers Committee has had a long-standing commitment to including conversations and sharing of best practices regarding white privilege in women's centers' work as an integral component of our pre-conference. This conversation, facilitated by one or more women's center staff, will provide space for continuing this important conversation.

034. PANEL
STRATEGIC DIVERSITY PLANNING FOR WOMEN'S CENTERS
North: 201

In this session we will explore the value of diversity strategic plans for women's centers, what is included, and how to write a plan. We will devote particular attention to developing a strategic planning process that is inclusive, strengthens internal and external partnerships and alliances, and lays the groundwork for successful implementation of the plan.

Presenter: Michelle Meyers, Meyers & Munafo, LLC

5:00PM - 5:30PM CLOSING SESSION
ABOUT THE PA&D COMMITTEE

The PA&D Committee consists of all Women's Studies program administrators (chairs, directors, coordinators) whose programs, departments or other academic units are member institutions of NWSA. This body is convened once a year for a Business Meeting at the annual NWSA Conference and is sustained by the Program Administrator Listserv (PAlist).

The Program Administration and Development Committee is a standing committee in NWSA specifically designed to represent the interests and needs of administrators of Women's Studies programs and departments to the Governing Council of NWSA and to assist NWSA in meeting the needs of Women's Studies administrators and their departments and programs.

012. ROUNDTABLE
DISTANCE EDUCATION IN WOMEN’S STUDIES: THE WAVE OF THE FUTURE?
South: 236
Distance education has become increasingly popular at our institution where we will offer our first on-line Introduction to Women’s Studies class this coming semester. In a rural state such as ours distance education offers an opportunity for many nontraditional women students to get the education they desire. At the same time, on-line courses challenge the very nature of feminist pedagogy, which relies on personal interaction. This roundtable will explore the ways in which distance education both challenges and enhances our Women’s Studies curriculum.

013. PANEL
INTRODUCING WOMEN’S STUDIES: THINKING ABOUT THE ROLE OF THE INTRODUCTORY COURSE(S)
South: 237
Explores the ‘introductory’ course in Women’s Studies and the role of program administrators in articulating its function and purpose. How does the intro course operate to define the field/discipline as a whole — for ourselves, for students, for colleagues, for administrators? Presenters from a variety of institutional contexts and locations will examine how this course works to both reflect and shape particular understandings of what counts as Women’s Studies.

NEW DIRECTORS WORKSHOP
South: 233
This workshop is designed for new program directors attending the PAD conference for the first time; we hope it will offer tips to new directors (from a wide range of programs/institutions) on how to flourish, especially in their first few years. We are looking for experienced directors to share not only their proven strategies and creative ideas, but also mistakes they’ve made and approaches they’ve learned to avoid.

015. PANEL
WRITING AN ANNUAL REPORT
South: 234
Often required of department chairs, annual reports can also be a strategic tool for program growth at the hands of coordinators of small programs. But how do you create an effective document? What should you cover, how should you present it, and to whom should it be directed? Whether you’ve never written a report before or would like to make yours more effective, our presenters (experienced in a wide variety of institutional settings) will offer practical advice and respond to questions. Participants will also be invited to share their own experience and advice.

FROM ME TO YOU: INTER-GENERATIONAL CONVERSATIONS ABOUT TURNING OVER AND LETTING GO OF PROGRAMS
South: 235
The transition of leadership within Women’s and Gender Studies Programs provides tremendous challenges and opportunities, both for those who hand over programs and those who inherit them. This roundtable will provide ideas and strategies for handling transitions. Inter-generational pairs will focus on the following themes: the issues involved in transition and letting go, and practical suggestions about how best to handle a transition; different generational perspectives and how they have shaped assumptions, expectations, and strategies involved in transitioning leadership; and models of inter-generational collaboration and mentorship that provide alternatives to the paradigm of “letting go.”

MORE MEN IN WOMEN'S STUDIES CLASSES: WHAT WORKS, WHAT DOESN'T, AND THE CONSEQUENCES
South: 236

For most women's studies programs gender parity in their classes would mean a near doubling of their enrollments. This roundtable is planned to be a practical and theoretical discussion of research on the current status of male students in women's studies, thoughts from men in women's studies classes, the techniques that have been used to try to increase the percentage of men, strategies and assignments used to engage male students with women's studies in meaningful ways, and the consequences of increasing the male presence on content, women's studies as a "safe space", and potential social change.

BALANCING ACT: THE DANCE OF MANAGING A WOMEN'S CENTER AND A WOMEN'S STUDIES PROGRAM
South: 237

Scheduling classes, teaching in the academic program, and advising students are at the core of all women's and gender studies programs while programming, working with students outside the classroom, and often counseling students are just a few of the issues that face a woman's center. On many campuses both the academic program and the student affairs responsibilities are handled by the same person. This panel explores the benefits of being in charge of both as well as the conflicts that can arise over such important issues as resources.

029. PANEL
NO BUDGET, NO DIRECTOR, NO FACULTY LINES: DOING WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES ANYWAY
South: 233

This panel will address concerns of small women's and gender studies programs with limited budgets, few or no devoted WC faculty lines, and no full-time directors or staff. Panelists will describe ways in which they have achieved success in their programs despite such challenges and will also seek the participation of audience members who have faced similar situations.

STILL MAKING IT SEXY: BRANDING, SELLING, AND PROMOTING WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES, PART 2
South: 234

Last year, this panel began exploring the public relations of "PR" of Women's and Gender Studies. Panelists discussed such topics as publications, products, promotional materials, and event planning and outreach. This year, panelists focus on logos/icons, slogans, branding, and marketing of Women's and Gender Studies. Each panelist will investigate one of these particular aspects of PR and encourage participants to consider (even bring) PR from their own programs to examine and develop.

CRITICAL ISSUES IN JOB RECRUITMENT/PLACEMENT AT NWSA
SOUTH: 235

In anticipation of the inclusion of a recruitment/placement process at the November 2009 NWSA conference, this session will provide information regarding the status of preparations for the placement process, best practices in conference recruitment, strategies to assist PAs as they prepare for recruiting new faculty, strategies for preparing students for the job market/conference recruitment, and opportunities to offer recommendations for the conduct of the placement process. Panelists will provide resource materials to assist PAs with recruitment, and after brief introductions to the above topics will allow the session to focus on those issues which are most pressing to the attendees.

PLANNING A CONFERENCE: TIPS AND CHECKLISTS FROM THE TRENCHES
South: 236

Planning any conference is a challenge, but coordinating a meeting with attendees from beyond your campus entails many new concerns, such as publicity, regional networking, speaker bookings, transportation/lodging arrangements, costs and fees, and the sheer logistics of coordinating all necessary campus services. Join us for tips from five different NWSA regions on how to plan and conduct a successful meeting, from a one-day faculty-led workshop to a multi-day regional conference with nationally prominent speakers.

CLOSING REFRESHMENTS AND NETWORKING
South: 232

MUSE is a women's choir dedicated to musical excellence and social change. In keeping with our belief that diversity is strength, we are feminist women of varied ages, races, and ethnicities with a range of musical abilities, political interests, and life experiences.

We are women loving women; we are heterosexual, lesbian and bisexual women united in song. We commission and seek out music composed by women, pieces written to enhance the sound of women's voices, and songs that honor the enduring spirit of all peoples. In performing, we strive for a concert experience that entertains, inspires, motivates, heals, and creates a feeling of community with our audience.

MUSE began her third decade by traveling to Montreal in July 2004 for the GALA VII International Choral Festival. MUSE performed the world premieres of Liberty or Death Suite by Bernice Johnson Reagon and Mayim Maya by Daniel Galay. Based on the life of Harriet Tubman, Dr. Reagon's suite was commissioned in honor of the opening of the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center and MUSE's 10th New Spirituals Concert.

Today, MUSE performs in about 30 venues each season and has grown to sixty singers with a volunteer staff of over a dozen. MUSE is highly regarded nationally as well as in the greater Cincinnati area.

7:00 PM, GRAND BALLROOM A

WELCOME, NWSA PRESIDENT
BARB HOWE

Barbara J. Howe became director of the Center for Women's Studies at the University of West Virginia in July 2000. She teaches the History of American Women course, in addition to courses in women's studies. She is cochair of the advisory committee for the Status of Women in West Virginia report that the Institute for Women's Policy Research published in November 2002 and is secretary of the Community Coalition for Social Justice. Howe's research interests focus on West Virginia women's history. This is the end of Barb's two-year term as President of NWSA.

WELCOME, UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI PRESIDENT
NANCY ZIMPER

Nancy L. Zimpher - a widely recognized leader in higher education, civic engagement, economic development and urban education reform - serves as the president of the University of Cincinnati, one of the nation's top public research universities. She became UC's 25th president and its first woman president in October 2003. Under her leadership, UC embarked on an unprecedented consultation process that involved a wide spectrum of the university's stakeholders and resulted in the strategic vision, UC21: Defining the New Urban Research University.

WELCOME, OHIO SECRETARY OF STATE JENNIFER BRUNNER

Ohio voters made Jennifer Brunner Ohio's first woman elected secretary of state on November 7, 2006. Jennifer brings unique perspective and exceptional credentials to be Ohio's top election official. Her prior service as legislative counsel for the Secretary of State's office, 13 years of election law private practice experience, including service as a special prosecutor for election fraud, and past experience as a member of the Franklin County Board of Elections clearly demonstrate her ability to be an effective and fair Secretary of State.

NWSA SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

NWSA President Barb Howe will announce the winners of the NWSA Graduate Scholarship, the Lesbian Caucus Graduate Scholarship awards during her welcome.

WELCOME AND INTRODUCTION OF PATRICIA HILL COLLINS,
IRMA MCCCLAURIN

Irma McClaurin is a 30-year veteran activist-scholar, administrator, and teacher. As a writer, she is committed to scholarship and communications that reaches beyond the academy to engage multiple publics, and her research is concerned with the social construction of inequality.

In her position as Program Officer in Education and Scholarship at the Ford Foundation, she oversaw a portfolio in support of scholarship and programs that deepen our understanding of issues related to race/ethnicity, class, gender and identity, and promoted the advancement of public knowledge. Prior to Ford, Dr. McClaurin was Associate Professor of Anthropology at the University of Florida, and coordinator of the Zora Neale Hurston Diaspora Research Project. In 2004, she was appointed the Mott Distinguished Professor of Women's Studies at Bennett College for Women where she launched the annual Africana Women's Studies and Womanist Religious Studies Summit, and from 2002-2004, she served as Deputy Provost at Fisk University.

A "born-again anthropologist," her current research is entitled Zora Neale Hurston: In the Shadow of Anthropology. From 1997-2004, McClaurin was Editor of Transforming Anthropology, the journal of the Association of Black Anthropologists. She is the author of Women of Belize: Gender and Change in Central America (Rutgers 2001 [1996]) and the Editor of Black Feminist Anthropology: Theory, Politics, Praxis and Poetics (Rutgers 2001), selected a Choice Outstanding Academic Title in 2003. Her forthcoming publications include two books for middle school children from Marshall Cavendish: The Future of Black America and The Civil Rights Movement in "The Drama of African American History" series. She is a frequent speaker, and has appeared on National Public Radio.
PATRICIA HILL COLLINS

Patricia Hill Collins is a Distinguished Professor at the University of Maryland, and is the President-Elect of the American Sociological Association. In 2008, she will become the 100th President of the Association.

Professor Collins has taught at several institutions, held editorial positions with professional journals, lectured widely in the United States and abroad, served in many capacities in professional organizations, and has acted as consultant for a number of businesses and community organizations. She is also Charles Phelps Taft Emeritus Professor of Sociology within the Department of African American Studies at the University of Cincinnati.

Professor Collins's current research interests lie in (1) investigating the actual and/or potential interconnections between critical race theory and American pragmatism; (2) theorizing intersectionality, namely, analyzing how race, class, gender, sexuality, ethnicity and nation mutually construct one another as concepts and as social phenomena; (3) exploring epistemologies of emancipatory knowledges, for example, ideologies of nationalism and feminism as well as influential knowledges of popular culture and everyday life; and (4) examining how the status of Black male and female youth sheds light on broader social processes such as globalization, transnationalism, class inequalities, racism and gender inequities.

GRAND BALLROOM A PRE-FUNCTION
Patricia Hill Collins will sign copies of her books Black Sexual Politics (Routledge, 2004)

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE THEME

RESISTING HEGEMONIES: RACE AND SEXUAL POLITICS IN NATION, REGION, EMPIRE

From its role in the time of slavery as a borderland space between North and South to its recent history of racist police violence, community uprisings, federal oversight, and homophobic statutes (subsequently repealed), Cincinnati reflects contemporary political struggles that are regionally unique as well as representative of how politics are manifested in many regions nationally and internationally.

Confronting racism and homophobia are central to the theoretical work of women's and gender studies and constitute ongoing struggles among the field's practitioners. In the past, Black feminist thought and LGBT, queer, and sexuality studies have offered productive and important challenges to the field of women's studies. Emphasizing race and sexual politics in this conference theme serves to honor these major theoretical contributions and to remind us that undoing the long history of racism and homophobia in women's and gender studies, Cincinnati, and beyond is an ongoing process that requires further study and action.

Foregrounding local, national, and international politics allows us to examine power relations and the differences they construct. This Call situates race and sexual politics in relation to nation, region, and empire in recognition of the importance of contemporary postcolonial and transnational feminist inquiry to such examinations. For example, feminist inquiry can focus on the structural building blocks of empire, namely regional integration projects that support neoliberal globalization while militarizing borders to keep migrants out.

Likewise queer scholarship helps identify heteronormative policies as methods by which exclusionist nationalist and hegemonic imperial projects are carried out. And putting feminist area studies in conversation with feminist ethnic/diaspora studies in conversation also enable us to make the connections necessary to resist empire "at home" and "abroad." Finally, these foci can also extend to the arena of electoral politics in this presidential election year, where race and gender issues will play a critical role.

The overall theme of "resisting hegemonies" was broad enough to invite various forms of interdisciplinary and disciplinary feminist inquiry as well as the full array of feminist pedagogical, activist, cultural, and spiritual work.

043. PANEL
"A LAB OF HER OWN": WOMEN IN SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING
NORTH: 200
Discussions about women and technology frequently center on either gendered philosophies of sciences and engineering, or on girls' science and math education in secondary schools. This panel adds another dimension: presented by three faculty members of a technical university, the panel discusses the issues of women's participation in science and engineering scholarship and education, recounts the battles for a Women's Resource Center, and tells the tale of the first Introduction to Women's Studies taught on campus.
Snezna Rogelj, New Mexico Tech
Susan Dunston, New Mexico Tech
Barbara Bonnekessen, New Mexico Tech
Moderator: Jill Dunlap, Northern Illinois University

044. PANEL
MEAT EATING: FEMINIST CROSS-CULTURAL PERSPECTIVES
NORTH: 201
As feminist scholarship has theorized the relationship between men and women, eco-feminism has helped uncover the domination-logic that structures relationships not only among humans but all life on the planet. This panel consists of a series of papers that explores vegetarianism and veganism as cross-cultural forms of resistance against patriarchal forms of domination.
Marti Kheel, Graduate Theological Union

051. PANEL
THEORIZING AT THE MARGINS: NEW DIRECTIONS IN BLACK FEMINIST THEORY
NORTH: 210

As a new generation of Black Feminist scholars, who engage black women's cultural production, we are interested in what remains beyond the boundaries of black feminist theorizing. We seek to think through questions such as: How is black feminism poised to deal with new questions? How can black feminism move into new territories and bring complexity to static modes of theorizing? Specifically, this panel will engage with the problems and promises of theorizing the black female body in popular culture, questions of citizenship and the politics of location, and the intersection of black feminist theory and post-structuralist theory.

Ramona Joyce Bell, Bowling Green State University
Anne Michelle Mitchell, Ohio State University

Moderator: Alina Bennett, The Ohio State University

052. PANEL
TECHNOLOGIES OF CITIZENSHIP: SHAPING POLITICAL SUBJECTS
NORTH: 211

The theme "Resisting Hegemonies" links contemporary political phenomena like neoliberalism to global exclusionary and imperialist projects. Science and technology play a key role in constructing and transmitting hegemonic categories, practices, and identities, but can also help develop new forms of political participation and outflank oppression. What differentiated science and technology as the practice of domination from science and technology as the practice of freedom? This panel surveys "technologies of citizenship," those discourses, artifacts, and tactics "aimed at making individuals politically active and capable of self-government," exploring how the micropractices of technoscientific enterprises create and maintain particular forms of political subjectivity.

Moderator: Virginia Eubanks, SUNY Albany

053. PANEL
THE POLITICS, PRACTICE AND VALUE OF PROGRAM REVIEW
NORTH: 212

Formal program review assists women's centers to demonstrate the critical role they play in supporting student learning and retention of female students, faculty and staff. The presenters will address elements of, and how to prepare for, a successful program review. Panels will also discuss the politics of program review and the new CAS Standards and Guidelines for Women Student Programs and Services as a program review tool. This session will be useful to anyone anticipating program review, interested in becoming an external reviewer or simply wishing to assess and improve the quality of their women's center.

058. ROUNDTABLE
RESISTING HEGEMONY THROUGH INNOVATIVE PEDAGOGY
SOUTH: 233
The purpose of this roundtable is to share innovative pedagogical strategies that enhance students' knowledge of the various dimensions and intersections of race, gender, class and sexuality with a particular focus on the dynamics of women's personal and public lives.
R. Dianne Bartlow, California State University, Northridge

059. PANEL
RESISTING THE HEGEMONY OF WHITE MALE SCIENCE: GENDER AND RACE, MYTHS AND BELIEFS IN SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH
SOUTH: 234
A number of myths and beliefs supported by scientific research surround gender and race; simultaneously gender and race permeate beliefs about who should do science and what constitutes good science. This panel features contributors to a spring, 2008 volume that explores the coevolution of gender, race and scientific research. Four women's studies faculty, including a physicist, a biologist, a psychologist, and a sociologist, explore scientific research often used to "prove" or overstate the case for anatomy, hormones, or genes as the basis for gender and racial differences in behaviors and abilities.
Patricia H. Miller, University of Georgia
Josephine A. Beoku-Betts, Florida Atlantic University
Moderator: Sue V. Rosser, Georgia Institute of Technology

060. PANEL
SEXUAL POLITICS AND GLOBAL HEGEMONIES: NEGOTIATING HETERONORMATIVITIES IN TRANS/NATIONAL CONTEXT
SOUTH: 235
This panel addresses on various levels how homosexuality, gayness, and queerness have become sites of dispute for broader struggles over political subjectivity, national sovereignty, westernization, development and globalization. Panelists will discuss how to rethink modes of heteronormativity as they have been racially constituted, institutionalized, and challenged in Southern Africa, Ecuador, and Bolivia.
Amy Lind, University of Cincinnati

Ashley Currier, Texas A&M University
Susan ann Paulson, Miami University
Moderator: Suparna Bhaskaran, Columbus, OH

061. PANEL
TEACHING FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE: POLITICS, ETHICS, AND IDENTITY
SOUTH: 236
This session will provide an introduction to the debate and dilemmas encountered by feminist pedagogues who engage social justice concerns in their classrooms as a means of challenging and resisting the dominant hegemony. Presenters will share their respective research on the ways in which teaching for social justice poses moral and ethical dilemmas, is met with student resistance, and blurs the boundaries between personal and professional. Following the presentation of papers, a moderator will facilitate discussion on the messiness of this work.
Susan Vandeventer Iverson, Kent State University
Jennifer H. James, Kent State University
Janice Kroeger, Kent State University
Moderator: Mazie Hough, University of Maine

062. PANEL
TRANSNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES ON WOMEN'S PARTICIPATORY POLICY MAKING
SOUTH: 237
This panel will critically examine the concept and practice of participatory policy making around women's issues in several cultural contexts. In critically analyzing attempted uses of participatory policy making among poor women in India and in the U.S. (Wisconsin) and among Korean immigrant women in the U.S., we elucidate strategies for resisting hegemonies in nation, regions, and empires.

063. PANEL
"TROUBLING 'LESSONS OF HISTORY': SEXED SUBJECTS AND CITIZENSHIP IN THE 19TH CENTURY"
SOUTH: 238

This panel explores the possibility of "resisting hegemonies" through the lessons to be learned about citizenship and women's agency from specific politico-legal situations in the nineteenth century. We begin with an examination of the implementation of capitalist standards of human worth within the context of labor and social welfare policies, which hegemonically have defined "productive citizenship." From there, we will examine specific experiences in which women's agency as citizens was called into question in the 19th century—rape within marriage, and abortion—and which continue to trouble women's agency as citizens today.

064. PANEL
AGE STUDIES AND LIFE WRITING
WEST: 251

In this session, panelists consider the inspirational concepts in the life writing of contemporary women writers, the reifungsroman (novel of ripening) and life review from a gender and genre perspective, and the ageist assumptions challenged in life writing. Key figures include Barbara Frey Waxman, Carolyn Heilbrun, Erica Jong, Maxine Kumin, Marilyn French, Judith Butler, Michel Foucault, Donna Haraway, Elizabeth Grosz, Luce Irigaray, Helene Cixous, Christine Overall, and Nikolas Rose.

065. PANEL
TARGETING OTHERS: POWER, TECHNOSCIENCE, AND SURVEILLANCE AT THE MARGINS
WEST: 252

This panel examines sites where surveillance technologies are used to identify, monitor, and regulate subjects occupying marginalized positions. As new technologies are introduced into existing institutions and social practices, how are power relations reconstituted through race, class, and gender? How does surveillance render invisible gendered and racialized structures when governed by neoliberal agendas? What can the proliferation of surveillance systems tell us about cultural hegemony, and the ways it is maintained?

POSITIONING OURSELVES: THE INTERSECTION OF PRIVILEGE AND REFLEXIVITY IN RESEARCH, ACTIVISM, AND TEACHING
NORTH: 205

This panel will explore issues of privilege and position within feminist research from both "inside" and "outside" perspectives. Panelists will address their own research, activism, and teaching as it relates to reflexivity and auto-ethnography, identifying issues of dissonance and resonance in their work. Particular attention will be paid to positions of privilege in terms of identifying self in the research, methodological decisions, and notions of authentic voice. Papers will interrogate multiple forms of privilege, including white privilege, heterosexual privilege, and gender privilege.

076. ROUNDTABLE
"YOU SAY YOU WANT A REVOLUTION?": PAVING NEW PATHS IN FEMINIST MENTORSHIP
NORTH: 206

Mentorship is essential to the progression of dynamic, sustainable feminist movements; however, many students and faculty experience intensely hostile and aggressive mentor/mentee relationships within feminist organizations/programs, which can severely impede the progress of both the individuals and the FRIDAY - 9:45 AM to 11:00 AM organizational goals that they are working toward. The participants in this roundtable will explore inter-generational conflicts within feminist movements and the sociopolitical influences that affect the climate for cultivating healthy, productive mentor/mentee relationships exploring the possibilities for more effective and equitable approaches to feminist mentorship.

077. WORKSHOP
BEING BETTER ALLIES: ETHICAL PERSONAL AND INSTITUTIONAL PRACTICES ACROSS DIFFERENCES
NORTH: 207

Join the Ethics, Equity, and Diversity Committee of NWSA for a workshop to develop strategies for honoring the strength that comes with diversity. We hope for participants to come away with concrete ways to resist the “paralysis of fear” (Beverly Tatum) many people face when doing diversity work. We ask: How can anti-racist white people be allies to people of color? How do we move past guilt and denial into more productive responses? How do we promote social justice practices institutionally? How can NWSA live up to its promise of “working to end racism and all forms of oppression”?

Julia Balen, California State University Channel Islands
Moderator: Maria Bevacqua, Minnesota State University Mankato

078. PANEL
EMERGENCE AS AN ALTERNATIVE TO RESISTANCE
NORTH: 208

Attendees will hear the founding and unfolding stories about the emerging, sixteen-year-old culture of a feminist organization founded in southwest Ohio. The focus is an exploration of Emergence, or Living Systems Theory as an alternative to Resistance in the project of transforming hegemonies. Panel members will engage participants in practices of the conscious feminine: non-coercive, creative, inclusive strategies of creating healthy systems rather than focusing on dismantling unhealthy hegemonies.

079. WORKSHOP
CAN YOUR STUDENTS COME OUT TO PLAY? CREATING CROSS-CAMPUS CONVERSATIONS
NORTH: 209

The goal of this workshop is to create one or more educational opportunities that get our students talking to each other across the country and internationally. Technology makes this possible, and NWSA owns course software that will provide us with a protected forum. Our topic for this initial exploration of the possibilities will be feminist activism. Come and create a plan for students to think together in a university without walls.

080. GIRLS’ STUDIES AND RESISTING HEGEMONIES: A GIRLS’ STUDIES INTEREST GROUP-SPONSORED DISCUSSION AND NETWORKING EVENT
NORTH: 210

The Girls’ Studies Interest Group invites members and other interested individuals to participate in this informal gathering where scholars of girls and girlhood can discuss the relations between girls’ studies and the issues raised by this year’s conference themes. Participants will also have the opportunity to interact with other scholars with similar interests, share information about their current research projects, trade resources and ideas, develop connections and collaborations, and discuss the challenges and opportunities for this emerging sub-field.

Kat A. Strzepek, St. Ambrose University

081. PANEL
KEY TERMS AND NARRATIVE CONTEXTS: THEORIZING THE STORIES THAT STRUCTURE THE FIELD OF WOMEN’S STUDIES
NORTH: 211

We argue that women’s studies practitioners’ understandings of key terms (“inter-disciplinarity”, “activism”, “feminism”, “transnationalism”, “experience”, and even “women’s studies”) are produced from and limited by the stories we tell ourselves about the field. In other words, these stories are not just in the field but in fact structure the field. Each of us will present a paper that analyzes a single term. Then, during the post-paper discussion we will ask the audience to name other taken-for-granted terms that they see as structuring the field of women’s studies and/or open up a women’s studies narrative in need of “troubling”.

RESISTING HEGEMONIES: MAPPING TAIWAN WOMEN’S COMMUNITIES
NORTH: 212

This panel aims to present how Taiwan women negotiate sexual, national and historical boundaries to reconstruct their identity, community, and further pass on their feminist legacy. By examining the rhetoric and writing of contemporary Taiwan women in different discursive sites such as short stories, internet, and anthologies, we are interested in exploring the interlocking forces of ethnicity, sexuality, and nation that inform and restructure Taiwan women’s lives. This panel intends to initiate a platform for dialogue among feminist scholars so that we may make the connections necessary to resist scattered hegemonies “at home” and “abroad.”

This panel draws together six undergraduate student papers developed in a unique and innovative course on the sex industry. Specifically, presenters use radical and sex radical feminist theoretical frameworks to explore the stigma sex workers endure, attitudes toward sex workers, the experience of being a phone sex worker, how representations of sex workers affect women’s relationships outside the industry and the ways that attitudes about women’s sexual exploitation have entered the mainstream through an analysis of the television show Wonder Woman.

Popular culture is saturated with confessional texts and yet most of these confessions come from normative bodies. We will interrogate the ways in which autobiography works to both establish and undermine the kinds of citizens and citizenship that are (re)presentable. Our panel will critically examine cultural commitments to autobiographical methodologies as practices in the service of getting at capital “T” truths. This panel seeks to engage the question: What are the consequences for troubling both autobiographical texts and methods?

This panel explores the hegemonic resistance through dress of three generations of U.S. feminists. Panelists address First Wave resistance from bloomers in the 1850s to the 1920’s flappers; second Wave resistance, which is manifested through a rejection of sociocultural standards of femininity and beauty; and a newly emerging Third Wave resistance, reflected in many of our students, that redefines as “feminist” the act of dressing in revealing, sexy attire. Whether or not this act is one of feminist resistance will be the starting point of a group discussion following the presentations.

This panel self reflects on national and cross national hegemonies as we conduct research and teach introductory women’s studies courses about and or within India to U.S. students. Our experiences, when compared with our intent, reveal complicated realities. Student outcomes, including clips from student documentaries about India, prepared in two different contexts (on campus and while abroad), will facilitate panel and audience discussion about resisting and replicating hegemonies.

EMPIRE, MILITARIZATION, AND FEMINIST POLITICS
SOUTH: 236
This roundtable, consisting of feminist scholars in the areas of peace theorizing, international relations, conflict resolution, cultural studies, and Middle East and Latin American studies, will engage debates on the nature of empire and the role of militarization in it and their implications for feminist politics. It will particularly focus on debates over how gender, race, and sexuality both challenge and sustain militarized empire and discuss what a feminist politics in resistance to anti-militarized empire might entail.

RESISTANCE IS FERTILE: DIRECT ACTION IN THE QUEER, ANIMAL, AND EARTH LIBERATION MOVEMENTS
WEST: 252
This panel explores women's participation in three currents of resistance: queer liberation, and earth and animal liberation.
Women play strong and prominent roles in these radical social movements and report facing uphill battles integrating feminist politics with other forms of resistance in which they take part.
Direct action by women is rarely examined in the academic context of women's studies, but is more likely to appear in criminal justice literature. Each contributor provides a brief overview of the movement, addressing the role of women in general with a more in-depth look at the biographies of particular women activists.

to some people to the detriment of others. But what if we were to re-imagine what privilege is -- or broaden it to include simply having access to something-- an expertise in webdesign, access to an extensive mailing list, first-hand knowledge of what it means to have your reproductive rights limited. That more egalitarian definition ensures that we all have some privilege, leaving us to answer another question: how do we harness it for the greater good?

TOWARDS A POLITICS OF CRITICAL RELATIONALITY:
NAVIGATING THE EXCESSES OF IDENTITARIAN AND POSTRACE/POSTFEMINIST DISCOURSES
WEST: 262
This panel critically engages with the problems of essentialist identitarianism, as well as the excesses of "post" identity in order to move towards a relational framework of political identification.
We consider both the reification of identity within the feminist, anti-racist, and queer movements, as well as how the post-identity claims of "post race" and "post feminist" discourses serve to maintain structures of racial, gender, and heteronormative oppression, exploring the possibilities of movements based not so much on pre-determined notions of "who" you are, but on political notions of "where" you are and with whom you stand.

FEMINIST RESISTANCE TO RECENT ATTACKS ON WOMEN'S RIGHTS IN THE U.S.: SEX SEGREGATION IN EDUCATION, WOMEN'S ATHLETIC OPPORTUNITY, AND EMERGENCY CONTRACEPTION
NORTH: 202
Conservative attacks on women's rights under the auspices or with the blessing of the Bush administration are eroding women's equal educational opportunity and reproductive rights. The three presenters on this panel will explain these attacks and describe feminist resistance in the areas of sex-segregated education, women's athletic opportunity, and emergency contraception. The panelists are academics and activists currently working on the issues they will address. This panel is sponsored by the Law and Public Policy Interest Group.

Moderator: Nora Gresch, University of Vienna
Many scholars and activists have addressed how sexuality has been regulated by various institutions and through "daily life," as well as how disputes over sexuality undergird broader struggles concerning sovereignty, nation-building, globalization and empire. A great deal of current discussion on sexuality, particularly in postcolonial societies, has taken place in a state of international moral panic. How women's bodies are marked in sexualized terms - be it through discourses of globalization, racialization, or trans/national labor circuits - contributes to their (im)mobility as sexual citizens. Yet discussions of sexual agency, pleasure, and the negotiation of desire or eroticism often get left out of the discussion. On this panel, three noted scholars of postcolonial sexuality studies discuss their own work in relation to this broad and engaging field, with the aim of bringing to fore some of the key areas of debate and suggesting possibilities for re-imagining sexual agency outside the (hetero)normative grain of Eurocentric pathologies and racial taxonomies.

AMY LIND, UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI

Amy Lind is Mary Ellen Heintz Endowed Chair and Associate Professor of Women's Studies and Affiliated Associate Professor of Planning at the University of Cincinnati. Her research has focused on gender, development and globalization in the Americas, with an emphasis on women's community-based responses to neoliberal restructuring in the Andes. She has conducted research and worked professionally in Ecuador since 1988, where she now also periodically teaches graduate courses and lectures. Lind has received Fulbright and Inter-American Foundation grants for her research on gender and economic restructuring in Ecuador. Her book, Gendered Paradoxes: Women's Movements, State Restructuring and Global Development in Ecuador (Penn State Press, 2005), addresses the paradoxical ways in which women's organizations responded to neoliberal governance in Ecuador during the 1980-2005 period.

Lind has worked as a consultant in the areas of gender planning, community development, social development, and diversity training. Her articles have appeared in journals such as World Development, Journal of Developing Societies, Latin American Perspectives, and Women's Studies Quarterly and in several anthologies. She is currently working on a book length manuscript, Querying Development, which focuses on development practitioners' views on gender and sexuality and their impacts on international development policies in the global South.

ARA WILSON, DUKE UNIVERSITY

Ara Wilson is Associate Professor of Women's Studies and Cultural Anthropology and Director of the Study of Sexualities.

Wilson's research Interests include: gender + sexuality in global modernity; transnational feminism (NGOs + anti-globalization); urban Southeast Asia and transnational zones; cultural logics of global capital. Current projects include: Sexual Latitudes: The Erotic Politics of Globalization (book), Market Shrines in Bangkok, and Medical Tourism.

Her work contributes to the feminist ethnography of globalization by providing theoretically engaged descriptions of transnational sites and processes. Her approach combines attention to political economy, critical studies of culture, and post-colonial critiques of Eurocentrism. Wilson use long term fieldwork in Bangkok, Thailand to explore how sexuality, gender and ethnicity are produced and transformed through the modernity of the non-Western world. She is working to develop ways to analyze gender/sexuality at a global scale, in part by studying such international events as the 1995 Beijing UN Conference on Women or the World Social Forum. This research is part of a current book project, Sexual Latitudes, that considers the implication of globalization as a stage for sexual politics. I am also in the early phases of a project on medical tourism to Thailand.

ALICIA ARRIZÓN, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, RIVERSIDE

Alicia Arrizón is Professor and Chair in the College of Humanities, Arts, and Social Sciences, Women's Studies, at the University of California, Riverside. She was awarded a Residence Fellowship at the UCHRI: University of California Humanities Research Institute (UC Irvine, January- June 2004).

Her book Latina Performance: Traversing the Stage, (Indiana University Press, 1999) was selected as one of ten "Outstanding Academic Titles" by Choice in 2000.

Her research includes Critical Theory, Cultural Studies, Theatre and Performance Studies, Feminist Theory; Chicana(o) Latin American/U.S. Latino Literatures and Cultures; Ethnicity, Race, Gender, and Sexualities.

Her recent publication, Queering Mestizaje: Transculturation and Performance (Ann Arbor: The University of Michigan Press, 2006), employs theories of postcolonial cultural studies (including performance studies, queer and feminist theory) to examine the notion of mestizaje—the mixing of races, and specifically indigenous peoples with European colonizers—and how this phenomenon manifests itself in three geographically diverse spaces: the U.S., Latin America, and the Philippines. Arrizón argues that as an imaginary site for racialized, gendered, and sexualized identities, mestizaje raises questions about historical transformation and cultural memory across Spanish postcolonial sites.

Latina Performance: Traversing the Stage (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1999), examines the Latina subject whose work as dramatist, actress, theorist, and or critic further defines the field of theatre and performance in the United States. Arrizón looks at the cultural politics that flows from the intersection of gender, ethnicity, race, class, and sexuality.

KAMALA KEMPADOO, YORK UNIVERSITY, CA

Kamala Kempadoo is Professor of Sociology and Interim Director of the Graduate Programme in Social and Political Thought at the School of Women's Studies at York University in Toronto.

She specializes in transnational and Caribbean feminisms; sex work and sexual-economic relations; global trafficking of persons; and intersections of race, gender and class.

Kempadoo is author of Trafficking and Prostitution Reconsidered: New Perspectives on Migration, Sex Work, and Human Rights (Paradigm, 2005). Trafficking and prostitution are widely believed to be synonymous, and to be leading international crimes. This collection argues against such sensationalism and advances carefully considered and grounded alternatives for understanding transnational migrations, forced labor, sex work, and livelihood strategies under new forms of globalization. From their long-term engagements as anti-trafficking advocates, the authors unpack the contemporary international debate on trafficking. They maintain that rather than a new 'white slave trade,' we are witnessing today, more broadly, an increase in the violation of the rights of freedom of movement, decent employment, and social and economic security. Critical examinations of state anti-trafficking interventions, including the US-led War on Trafficking, also reveal links to a broader attack on undocumented migrants, tribal and aboriginal peoples, poor women, men and children, and sex workers.

An earlier publication, Sexing the Caribbean: Gender, Race and Sexual Labor (Routledge, 2004), illuminates intersections of gender, sexuality, work, race and economic relations in the Caribbean, with a central focus on the social construction of prostitution and other types of transactional sexual relations that many women, and increasingly more young men, are engaged in. Sex tourism, migrant sex work, HIV/AIDS, and legalized prostitution are topics that are examined alongside sex workers agency, resistance and organization. The book challenges conceptions of prostitution as, exclusively, a form of violence to women, and argues that sexual-economic relations can be sites of both oppression and liberation.

Kempadoo has a B.A. and M.A. from the University of Amsterdam, and a Ph.D. from the University of Colorado.

25 YEARS OF CARE ETHICS: RESISTING HEGEMONIES IN MORAL THEORY
NORTH: 206
The publication of Carol Gilligan's In A Different Voice in 1982 and Nel Noddings' Caring in 1984 marked the beginning of a significant feminist challenge to liberal moral theorizing. In the ensuing quarter century, volumes were written about this revolutionary approach to ethics that emphasizes relationships, context, and emotion over traditional rules of adjudication. To mark this anniversary, an interdisciplinary panel of scholars will address the history, impact, status, and potential of feminist care ethics.

BIRTHMOTHERS: INVISIBILITY TO ACTIVISM? OR CONTINUING SUBORDINATION?
NORTH: 207
This panel will analyze reasons for the invisibility and legal and social exploitation of birthmothers in the past, will explore their more recent activism, and will present a theoretical justification for including them in a differently-defined family. It will also explore ways their legal subordination continues with regard to the short time given them in many states for irrevocable consent to relinquishment. The panel includes an anthropologist, a law professor, and several writer-activist birth-mothers.

FAT FEMINISMS: JOURNEYS OF SIZE ACTIVISM AND GENDER IDENTITIES IN MEDIA AND CULTURE
NORTH: 208

In particular, the presentation will address issues of agency, media and activism in contemporary US society. Papers will look at lesbian fat activism in online communities, fat women sex workers, journeys to becoming a fat activist and the media representation of Tyler Perry's Madea. Combined, the papers will connect the social movements of fat acceptance and feminism, and show how contemporary activists and media makers are defying cultural expectations to carve out a place for "othered" bodies in our culture.

FERTILITY, FICTION, AND FANTASY: REPRESENTATION AND THE CULTURAL IMPERATIVES OF MOTHERING
NORTH: 209
The ideology that motherhood is the core of the female identity is one of the most powerful cultural imperatives for women. This hegemony is inflected by racial and class differences that reveal themselves in discourses of fertility, employment, and the relationship of mothering to identity. Combining ethnographic methods with textual analysis, this panel session will discuss cultural representations of mothering in the United States. Addressing a range of texts, this session explores conflicting messages of mothering from neo-liberal discourses of financially independent, professionally self-determined mothers to conservative representations of financially dependent, socially isolated non-mothers.

While tenured faculty may enjoy a little more freedom of expression than administrators in their support of students' political activities, what does it mean when "agents of the institution" engage with students in their activism; teach it; and/ or create it?

(DON'T) "GIVE ME YOUR POOR, YOUR TIRED, YOUR HUDDLED MASSES": REFLECTIONS ON CITIZENSHIP, NATIONALISM, AND BELONGING
NORTH: 212
"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses." While this phrase has long symbolized how the United States imagines itself, in reality this has not been the case. This panel will utilize feminist critiques and theories to address constructions of national membership and national belonging in the North American context. Panelists will focus on how US nationalist ideologies are constructed to include some and to exclude others. Panelists will draw on historic as well as present day examples in order to illustrate how racist, classist, sexist, and homophobic hegemonies have been institutionalized through law and cultural practices.

FEMINISM, FASHION AND FLAIR: RESISTING HEGEMONY WITH STYLE
SOUTH: 231
Fashion is one way women may choose to express our politics, personal identities, and aesthetic preferences. Yet fashion can also be used to repress women's freedom and sexuality by controlling and disciplining the body. Fashion can signal resistance to sexual mores and it can promote a problematic consumer culture. In other words, fashion contains the paradoxical potential for pleasure and subjugation, expression and conformity. Panel members consider what is at stake in terms of race, gender, class, and sexual politics when feminism and women's studies takes seriously the subject of fashion.

"REPRESENTATIONS OF RAPE AND SEXUAL ABUSE OF FEMALE ADOLESCENTS"
SOUTH: 232
Analyses of representations of rape and sexual abuse of female adolescents in a variety of genres, including the fiction of Lee Smith, the television series Veronica Mars, Alice Walker's Color Purple, Dorothy Allison's Bastard Out of Carolina, and several young adult novels. While these representations are part of an increased awareness and discussion of sexual violence, the emphasis on speaking out in several of these texts offers a limited and problematic approach to the problem of sexual violence. Alternative, more complex approaches to these problems, particularly those in works by Smith and young adult writer Erika Tamar, will also be discussed.

NEITHER WHORES NOR VIRGINS: DISMANTLING HIP-HOP'S HEGEMONIC STRUCTURES
SOUTH: 233
Hip-hop has graduated from a street corner pastime into a reliable news outlet and a lucrative business. Not only is it a genuine, gritty, emotional art form, it is also a formulaic, contractual moneymaking machine. Are women deterring themselves from making it in the hip-hop industry, or are men keeping the patriarchal structure intact? This gender divide forces us to ask how hip-hop artists and connoisseurs of this art form should dismantle the hegemonic structure within this industry to free the critical voices of female artists and entrepreneurs.

FEMINIST CRITIQUE AND COLLABORATION: DISMANTLING SYSTEMS OF DOMINATION WITHIN CAMPUS CULTURE

The work of this panel is to establish—despite the ongoing moral panic of a conservative American culture towards homosexuality and the frequent marginalization of sexuality in contemporary Women’s Studies—the urgency, energy, and agency produced by queer feminist inquiry across a wide range of discursive fields and lived experiences.

WOMEN’S HUMAN RIGHTS, CITIZENSHIPS AND IDENTITIES IN A NORTH AMERICAN CONTEXT
WEST: 264
This panel is the outcome of the “Women’s Human Rights, Citizenships and Identities in a North American Context” Institute held at York University in 2006. The institute is part of a student exchange program in women’s and gender studies between Mexican, Canadian, and US universities. The process of globalization and the interdependence among these states pose new and complex challenges for feminism. Therefore, it is vital to foster comparative analysis and to imagine new forms of activism beyond borders. Our goal is to present research based on the institute and highlight how the institute influenced our approach to research.

Moderator: Anne Sisson Runyan, University of Cincinnati
Feminist critiques of globalization have variously focused on the disproportionate impact on women, particularly in the global South, of global capitalist economic restructuring, cultural imperialism, and the neoliberal political restructuring of privatization. Feminist scholars and activists have also foregrounded women’s resistances to these forces at local, national, regional, and transnational levels and the cooperations, tensions, and problematics among these movements.

Such resistances, however, are further complicated by what some view as the rise of empire, which either coopts or further marginalizes such resistances. These well-known scholars of feminist globalization studies will offer their analyses of the current state of feminist resistances to globalization and how they can be furthered to act “against empire.”

VALENTINE M. MOGHADAM, PURDUE UNIVERSITY

Valentine Moghadam is Professor of Sociology and Director of Women’s Studies at Purdue University.

Her specializations include: Sociology of gender, gender and development, globalization and transnational social movements, sociology and political economy of the Middle East and North Africa.

From 2004-2006 she served as Chief of the Section on Gender Equality and Development in the Social and Human Sciences Sector of UNESCO, in Paris, France. Prior to that she was Professor of Sociology and Director of Women’s Studies at Illinois State University.

Born in Iran, Dr. Moghadam has devoted much research to development, social change, and gender in the Middle East, North Africa, and Afghanistan, but she also studies and publishes on the social and gender dynamics of globalization. Her first book, Modernizing Women: Gender and Social Change in the Middle East (1993, 2003) was selected as a Choice Outstanding Academic Book for 1993-94. Her third book, Globalizing Women: Transnational Feminist Networks (2005) received the American Political Science Association’s Victoria Schuck Award for the best book on Women and Politics in 2005 (August, 2006). She also has edited and contributed to seven books, most recently Social Policy and Economic Development in the Middle East (2006) and From Patriarchy to Empowerment?

MARY HAWKESWORTH, RUTGERS, THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY

Mary Hawkesworth is Professor of Women’s and Gender Studies and Senior Scholar at the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University. Her teaching and research interests include feminist theory, women and politics, contemporary political philosophy, philosophy of science, and social policy.

She is a founding member and past president of the Association for Middle East Women’s Studies and a founding contributor to the Journal of Middle East Women’s Studies.

Dr. Moghadam has held three fellowships – at Brown University’s Pembroke Center for Teaching and Research on Women (1988-89) for work on women and revolution in Iran and Afghanistan; a Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC)

She is the recipient of an ASA Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline grant (2003-04) for research on women’s movements in the Middle East and North Africa, 2003-04. She has been a consultant to many international organizations and lectures widely.

NWSA Conference 2008

NANCY NAPLES, UNIVERSITY OF CONNECTICUT

Dr. Nancy Naples teaches courses on sociology of gender; qualitative methodology; gender, politics, and the state; women’s activism and globalization; and feminist theory. By using a variety of research methods including ethnography, discourse analysis, archival research, and comparative research, she interrogates the relationship between the state, market, other social institutions and citizenship to determine how social actors are affected by, and resisting extra-local economic and political structures and policies.

She has explored the historical construction and implementation of welfare, immigration, rural economic development, and community control policies. She has also examined how members of low income and working class urban and rural communities respond to, reshape, and resist externally imposed policies and state-sponsored programs. She has also conducted research on programs designed to enhance access to justice for crime victims with disabilities and survivors of childhood sexual assault.

She is currently working on a book that investigates the link between global economic change, social policy, and community-based social restructuring in the rural US. Her current research is on sexual citizenship in comparative perspective. She served as President of Sociologists for Women in Society (2004) and has held elected office in the Society for the Study of Social Problems (SSSP), Eastern Sociological Society, the Pacific Sociological Association, and the American Sociological Association. She is currently serving as President of SSSP (2007-2008).

DEBRA J. LIEBOWITZ, DREW UNIVERSITY

Debra holds a joint appointment in Political Science and Women’s Studies. She received her B.A. from the University of Oregon in 1988, and received her Ph.D. from Rutgers University in January, 2000. Her research interests are in the areas of gender and transnational political organizing, with particular attention to international economic issues and Latin American Politics. While a graduate student at Rutgers University, she was the recipient of the University’s Graduate Student Teaching Excellence Award.

Her most recent publications include two forthcoming articles, “TCBy* in Limón, Costa Rica: (Re)Constructing Identity in International Service Learning” and “Constructing Cooperation: Feminist Activism and the North American Free Trade Agreement.” Debra was also the winner of the best paper award from the International Studies Association’s Feminist Theory and Gender Studies Section in 1998. Professor Liebowitz also has an extensive background developing educational programs that emphasize issues of gender, leadership and public policy both in the U.S. and abroad.

131. PANEL
EXPLORING IDENTITY, INTERSECTIONALITY, AND RESISTANCE
NORTH: 202
In this panel, we explore the connections between an individual's sense of identity and social change. We discuss this theme in three seemingly different empirical works: gay communities in rural areas, campus party culture, and women of color social movement organizations. All of these address the impacts of internalized discourses on possibilities for broader social change.

BRINGING SELF IN: DISCLOSURE AND IDENTITY POLITICS IN TEACHING ABOUT MARGINALIZATION
NORTH: 207
In this panel, participants will discuss and theorize how exposure of personal histories and identities can support transformative teaching goals but create notable challenges for instructors thaving about marginalization. Issues include tensions in (1) exposing an evolving sexual identity to GLBT and heterosexual students (2) violating cultural agreements by publicly unpacking social ills within the Black community during critical gender violence analysis, and (3) taking into account whiteness, regionalism, and individual experiences with both when teaching race inequality to majority students in heterogeneous areas. A significant portion of the discussion addresses with how each panelist sought to manage her situation.

FEMINIST APPALACHIAN STUDIES
NORTH: 208
The field of Appalachian Studies encompasses themes and lessons about the region's internal political-economy and its external political and economic relationships. As in many regions, Appalachian women have often been under-counted, undervalued, and underprivileged. But gender studies from a range of disciplines have revealed the importance of Appalachian women's contribution to the cause of social equality from challenging patriarchy in business and labor to participating in the environmental justice movement. This panel represents expertise on urban Appalachian women, gendered political relations in Appalachia, and gendered alliances in the industrial sector of Appalachia.

136. ROUNDTABLE
FIRST-DAY FEMINISM: EFFECTIVE STRATEGIES TO INTRODUCE FEMINISM
NORTH: 209
This roundtable will explore strategies for engaging students on the first day of a gender-studies course. In order to develop a space where students question and resist hegemonies, we need first to establish the personal relevance of issues around feminism and racism, encouraging students to recognize and critique their own stakes in the status quo and setting the stage for the intellectual and experiential approaches that are key in feminist pedagogy. Attendees will be encouraged to share ideas.

INNOVATIVE STRATEGIES FOR CONFRONTING HEGEMONIES: FROM TOLEDO TO TANZANIA
NORTH: 210
This roundtable brings together six of the faculty of the Department of Women's and Gender Studies at the University of Toledo to discuss their particular strategies for teaching, research, activism, and collaborations with local, regional, and international communities. These strategies reflect the research and teaching interests, academic expertise, and experiential knowledge of each innovative participant, as they address long histories and legacies of hegemonic, oppressive practices and policies.

"YOU DO WHAT?: GRADUATE WORK IN WOMEN’S STUDIES WHERE THERE IS NO GRADUATE PROGRAM IN WOMEN’S STUDIES"
NORTH: 211
Many universities continue to resist the creation of graduate programs in Women's Studies. Why? At a time when academia increasingly acknowledges the importance of inter-disciplinarity, how is it that the old model of graduate study, as focused on and taking place within "the disciplines" continues to exercise such hegemony? This panel will examine the institutional and personal situations of three generations of faculty and graduate students. It will explore the risks and benefits of doing interdisciplinary feminist teaching and research at the graduate level, outside the bounds of hegemonic departmental structures.

AND THE ACADEMY GOES TO: MESTIZAS, MOTHERS, QUEERS, AND TRAITORS TRANSFORMING ACADEMIC SPACE
NORTH: 212
While large portions of academic space remain entrenched in heteronormative practices, women students/scholars strategically create forms of resistance that reshape academic space. Within our panel, each presenter addresses how women resist the hegemonic, imperial processes in and outside the lines of colonizing academic spaces. Collectively we rethink academic space as we: critique maternal studies within Chicana Feminist studies and academia while claiming a maternal, academic space; actively utilize Mestiza rhetorical practices to negotiate women's space on campus; identify Latina scholars' subversive, political critiques of terrorism within and against the U.S.'s national narrative; and finally, theorize student agency in queering classrooms.

NEGOTIATING GIRLHOOD WITHIN EMPIRE AND NATION-BUILDING
SOUTH: 230
This panel investigates the experiences of girls growing up in Canada, the United States and the Caribbean as they negotiate girlhood within the power structures of racialized nations. The themes of the panel include the varied ways in which space operates differently for queer girls of colour, the managing of morality within colonial histories of Girl Guide organizations and the solidifying of racist discourses as a result of a horrific peer murder of a young Canadian girl.

141. WORKSHOP
WOMEN’S RIGHTS AS HUMAN RIGHTS: THE FEMALE GENITAL MUTILATION (FGM) QUESTION
SOUTH: 231
Should universal values of social justice and gender equality lead us to be critical of certain cultural practices? This workshop considers this question by examining the global challenge to women's human rights with a focus on (FGM). The concepts of universalism versus cultural relativism will be introduced/explained in the context of FGM and whether this is a cultural practice that should be respected or a human rights violation. Following a short DVD segment, participants will be prompted to evaluate FGM within the universalism versus cultural relativism frameworks. A feminist critical theory of recognition guides this inquiry.

142. PANEL
IN & OUT: PERVERSIONS OF RACE AND THE U.S. NATION BUILDING PROJECT
SOUTH: 232

Placed at the intersection of Ethnic and Queer Studies, we are interested in how the U.S. Nation State imagines itself as a social space, and the material effects of these imaginings. Our subjects place themselves outside of state sanctioned discourses of sexuality and gender, while at the same time circulating through these discourses. Engaging with three different time-periods and sets of materials, each paper's object of study relates to how individuals critically re-examination the hegemonic power of the state as a controlling force, and the moments in which persons work within but also against the capitalist market place.

VIGILANTES, VICTIMS AND VOWS: HEGEMONIES OF CITIZENSHIP
SOUTH: 233

Strategies for how we move from victimization to full citizenship are the source of on-going debate and animate this panel. Drawing upon different disciplinary tools and working through different texts (from law to films), each of the papers critically engages the discursive and material possibilities racialized/gendered/sexualized victims have for naming and opposing injury and injustice. We are especially attentive to the impact 9/11 had in foreclosing certain options and fore-grounding new forms of resistance as hegemonic notions of good citizenship are reformulated and re-inscribed.

THEORIZING RACIALIZED SEXUALITIES IN VISUAL CULTURE AND MEDIA REPRESENTATION
SOUTH: 234

This panel explores contemporary constructions of racialized sexuality and racialized body as “Other” across mass media. Our projects are united both in their intersectional analyses of race, class, gender, and sexual orientation, and in their commitments to interdisciplinary inquiry across a wide array of disciplinary bodies of knowledge. Our common concern with the relationship between mediated practice and cultural representation suggests the need to further analyze how institutions of social control continue to mark bodies and marginalize subjectivities through the regulation of commodified identity categories intent on inscribing meaning onto bodies.

CONSTRUCTING AND DEFINING WOMEN'S STUDIES:
(RE)EXAMINING THE INTRODUCTORY COURSE
WEST: 264
This round table session explores the 'introductory' course in Women's Studies, asking not only what is taught in that course, but more importantly, how that course operates to define the field for students (as well as for colleagues and administrators) -- intellectually and pedagogically. Presenters from a variety of institutional contexts and locations will examine not only what the intro course does, but how that content both reflects and shapes particular understandings of what counts as Women's Studies, in the process also exploring how it resonates with current debates about definitions in and about this field.

BALLROOMS: BALLROOM PRE-FUNCTION SPACE

BREAKING BREAD ACROSS DIFFERENCE: PEANUT BUTTER AND GENDER
Peggy Rivage-Seul, Berea College

On many Wednesdays of the academic calendar, we invite students, faculty, staff, retirees and community members to join in a feast of academic fellowship and sharing of food. Practicing hospitality to the "other," sharing food, we unite theory and practice of feminism. Though our numbers of majors and minors in women's studies remain small, through "Peanut Butter and Gender" we can reach across the community to share the tools for dismantling imperialist, white supremacist, capitalist patriarchy.

COLONIALIST PROJECTIONS: RACIAL AMBIVALENCE IN HOCH'S ETHNOGRAPHIC MUSEUM
Jackie M. Wang, New College of Florida

Dadaist Hannah Hoch was a Weimar collage artist known for her bold critiques of gender conventions. Obscured by Hoch's liberating depictions of gender, scholars neglect her colonialist representations of race. In her 1924-1936 series, From an Ethnographic Museum, Hoch depicts the "New Woman" in conflict with fragmented images of black men and with recontextualized ethnographic objects that function as signifiers of race. The ethnographic objects, procured through colonial conquest, are used unreflectively, revealing an awareness of gender and an ignorance of race. In the process, Hoch reduces black males to the primitive Other, portraying them as hyper-sexualized and animalistic.

FEMINISM IN BLACK AND WHITE
Maude M. Jennings, Ball State University

A black woman from the North and a white woman from the South strive to provide examples of feminism which reveal to their students that advocates for equality speak out despite skin color.

FROM SPREADING THE MISERY TO SPREADING THE JOY: CLEANING UP RACE RELATIONS IN MEMPHIS.
Tammy Marie Prater, University of Memphis

Memphis' second proposed sanitation worker's strike just a year after the death of Dr. Martin Luther King and the roles the Concerned Women of Memphis and Shelby County played in averting that strike is the central focus of the paper. Active in politics, the CWMSC were also active participants in the Civil Rights Movement. By stepping outside of accepted class and gender roles and using their volunteer spirit to help others, specifically poor blacks, this group of women embodies the historically underrepresented white presence in local civil rights work.

GIRLS’ ATTITUDES TOWARD GENDER IN INDIA
Jamie Colette Capuzzo, Mount Union College

India is home to a vibrant women's rights movement and a growing Women's Studies program. I had a unique opportunity to witness this fact in person while traveling throughout the country meeting women leaders and visiting Women's Studies programs in 2005 on a Fulbright-Hays fellowship. Based upon this experience, I became interested in what Indian girls think about gender and feminism. In Varanasi, I surveyed teen girls asking them questions about the roles of men and women, definitions of masculinity and femininity, problems facing women, and their impressions of feminists. The proposed poster will share what these girls taught me.

LATINA BEAUTY VS. AMERICAN BEAUTY: EXPLORING LATINAS’ SELF-ESTEEM AND BODY IMAGE IN RELATION TO CONTRASTING MODELS OF BEAUTY
Viviana Maria Bernal, Montclair State University

This paper seeks to understand the relationships Latinas, living in the United States, have with dominant American culture in contrast to Latino culture, how they internalize the standards of beauty in each, and the way in which these factors influence their level of self-esteem. Through in-depth interviews, I find that access to an alternative model of beauty allows the Latinas interviewed in my study to develop a high level of self-esteem which leads to the conclusion that access to alternative models of beauty that are consistently reinforced will lead to a higher level of self-esteem.

SISTERS IN DIALOGUE: THE FEMINISMS OF AFRICAN AND AFRICAN AMERICAN WOMEN
Arisika Rozak, California Institute of Integral Studies

Many contemporary African women have challenged the attempts of USA African Americans to universally name and frame the Black women's struggles against race, class and gender oppression. Some African women embrace the concept of feminism while rejecting the name; others use the term "womanist" to name and frame the reality of Black women's struggles for liberation and self-definition. Others believe "feminism" and "womanism" to be contested terms that do not reflect an African experience. This paper explores some of the controversies that have arisen as African and African Americans speak back to each other.

THE FEMINIST ZINE MOVEMENT: CLEARING THE WAY FOR YOUNG FEMINISTS
Rebekah Joy Orr, SUNY Brockport

What is a feminist zine? How have independent publications impacted the Women's Movement? How do you start a zine on a college campus? This poster session is designed to trace the history of the feminist zine movement and explore its impact on activism among young feminists. The poster will also detail the steps necessary in initiating an independent feminist publication on college campuses.
THE INTERSECTIONS OF GENDER, SEXUALITY, AND CULTURE: A FEMINIST ETHNOGRAPHIC STUDY OF A HMONG-AMERICAN WOMAN

Mypang Thao, Fresno, CA

Hmong immigrants have been residing in the United States since the mid-1970s. The children of these immigrants are the "second-generation" of Hmong-Americans. Within the Hmong-American community, there have been continuous struggles of cultural purity that continue to go unacknowledged. In my work, I will engage in a day-long feminist ethnographic interview with a Hmong-American woman in Fresno, CA in order to interrogate gender, sexuality, and culture. Through her autobiographical narrative, I hope to unveil the role of sexuality in the life of Hmong-American women. My goal is to understand the relationship between and among gender, sexuality, and culture.

APPROACHES TO FEMINIST ACTIVISM IN LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY

Sarah Hamilton Calendine, Transylvania University

In her essay "Testimony, Action Research, and Empowerment: Puerto Rico Women and Popular Education" (1991), Rina Benmayor challenges feminist researchers to stop assuming that their research gives their subjects voice. She maintains that through ESL classes taken or taught by the Puerto Rican women with whom she worked, the women were able to use their personal testimony to empower themselves. This paper builds upon Rina Benmayor's research to suggest that Mexican immigrant women practice feminist activism and resist domination not only by finding and asserting their own voices, but also by helping others to recognize and use their voices.

DESIRE AND CONQUEST: THE LANGUAGE OF MESTIZAJE, IN THE SPANISH CHRONICLES OF THE XVI CENTURY

Ivonne Heinz Balcazar, California State University Dominguez Hills

In this poster-presentation, I demonstrate that the Spanish chronicles served the purpose of justifying miscegenation by placing the burden of desire and sexuality on indigenous women. I show that the chronicles of Francisco de Gomara, Pedro de León, Bernal Diaz del Castillo, and Fernández de Oviedo had the rhetorical purpose of legitimizing the conquest. They legitimized forced miscegenation with indigenous women, who are portrayed as passionate toward the colonizers and accepting of their advances. Finally, I show how Spanish imperialist ideology utilizes the chronicles as a narrative that defends the empire and its fabricated "truth" regarding desire and mestizaje.

GENDER FACTORS AFFECTING FEMALE LABOUR INPUT IN THE NIGERIAN UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

Christiana Osaikihuwa Ogbohu, Obafemi Awolowo University

The concentration of women at lower levels of the university labour force is compounded by their gender attributes. This paper sought to study the gender variables affecting women's job performance in the system. It targets the breaking of the 'glass ceiling' existing in the system. Response from 730 females in twelve Nigerian universities revealed that factors such as child rearing, domestic responsibilities and marriage impact on females' job performance while the aspects of their sexuality do not. The study concluded that changes in policy and academic culture are essential in building a gender-friendly university work environment.

GENDER GAP IN LAW SCHOOL STUDENTS' CAREER ASPIRATIONS IN CHINA: A COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS

Simin Gao, Arizona State University

This study tracks the change of students' career aspirations from their first year to last year in the top 3 law schools in China. Using survey data, this study demonstrates that notably women had lower expectations for their career trajectories than did men at the beginning of legal education and the gender gap enlarged in their last year in law school. Concerns of the gender bias climate in legal profession and the conflict of work and family played a role in women's perception of possible career paths. Better performance in academic work than men did not improve women's career expectations obviously.

GLOBAL WARMING'S PROPOSED "SOLUTIONS" THROUGH THE LENS OF IMPERIAL, RACIAL, CLASS, AND SEXUAL POLITICS

Franklin Bell

As the reality of global warming makes itself felt, proposed solutions are coming to the fore, including attempts to reduce emissions and plans for adapting to the effects of climate change. Predominant political discourse abstracts the problems and the proposed solutions from politics of race, class, sex, and empire, often posing problems and solutions as non-political. This paper takes a critical perspective highlighting underlying social structures, divisions, and struggles. The Kyoto Protocol, Al Gore's "An Inconvenient Truth," and environmentalist alternatives including Monbiot's "Heat" and McKibben's "Deep Economy" are examined for differential effects and for reinforcement or destabilization of existing hegemonies.

VOICES OF GIRLS IN URBAN SCHOOLS: COLLABORATIVE FIELD RESEARCH WITH UNDERGRADUATES

Carolyn S. Ridoune, University of Dayton
Lauren Roberts, University of Dayton;
Elizabeth Whitman, University of Dayton
Nora L. Jennings, University of Dayton

We describe a collaborative research project aimed at giving voice to the experience of girls in urban schools in a mid-size, midwestern city. The research, codesigned and co-led by a humanities scholar in Women's Studies and a qualitative researcher in Education, has largely been carried out by undergraduates from our units, whom we trained in basic feminist approaches to qualitative field research. Bringing together insights from girls' studies, women's studies, and schooling studies, we highlight possibilities for collaborative work with broad scholarly and curricular outcomes. Although we share preliminary findings, our poster's focus is on the design and process itself.

GRANNY WARS: ELDERCARE AND EMPLOYMENT AT THE INTERSECTION OF RACE AND CLASS
Alexis Colleen Azeff, Penn State University-Abington College

While discussion abounds over the decision to privilege either career or children, the so-called “mommy wars,” a growing number of American women are opting out of the workforce to care for elderly parents. A variety of racial, ethnic, and economic standpoints will be explored to clarify the disparities in support and services available to caregivers of differing backgrounds. By examining the underlying socialization of children that produces caregiver/daughters and worker/sons, a reassessment of the nuclear family and social policy, as well as the restructuring of work environments to accommodate the needs of both genders in providing eldercare, will emerge.

HAITIAN IMMIGRANTS TO THE US: THEORIES OF REPRESENTATION AND GENDERED MIGRATION
Erin Leigh Durban, University of Arizona

The poster exhibits research on relationships between the literary and visual art representations produced by women and queer-identified Haitian immigrants to the United States in the last part of the Twentieth Century and the gender and migration theories of Saskia Sassen. Lenelle Moise and Assoto Saint's poetry, Edwidge Danticat's book Breath, Eyes, Memory, Maude Heurtelou's writings, Vladimir Cyber's multimedia works, and Marilene Phipps' paintings are the works of representation put into conversation with Saskia Sassen's migration theory in order to extrapolate trends about the gendered, racialized, sexualized, and nationalized experiences of Haitian immigrants in the United States.

MY FAMILY COOKBOOK: A JOURNEY THROUGH MIGRATION AND IDENTITY
Christina Maria Ceisel, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Embedded in food is a historical memory of colonialism, war, famine, and native flora and fauna. The maintenance of culinary traditions serves to re-create the “homeland” in a sense we are home when we eat the foods of our childhood. Discourses of ethnic foods involve debates over authenticity, memory, and belonging. The production of these foods serves to re-produce the “homeland” maintaining a cultural memory, which is passed on to subsequent generations. I examine my own family’s recipes and culinary traditions to unravel the gendered, classed, and ethnic histories held within.

SOFT POWER AND POST-MODERN FORMS OF PATRIARCHY
Claudia Brazzale, University of California, Los Angeles

Examining the family firms that generated the economic boom of northeastern Italy, this presentation will scrutinize the gender relations that structure these firms in order to examine how paternalistic authority is inscribed in new “postmodern” ways. My contention is that the project of entering modernity superseded women’s emancipation and backtracked women’s struggle for gender equality.

NEOLIBERALISM AND THE RE/PRODUCTION OF GENDER INEQUALITY IN THAILAND
Anna Yatskevich, SUNY Purchase

Within the last thirty years Neoliberalism became a dominant economic policy promoted by the IMF, WTO and World Bank bringing profound changes in the social, economic and cultural spheres of the developing countries. The paper will focus on the effects of Neoliberalism in Thailand on the spheres of re/production and gender using Marxist and feminist theories. My research challenges the dominant free market ideology and investigates the gendered aspect of the economic development in Thailand.

THE AMERICAN MYTH OF MOTHER AND THE CASE OF IMMIGRANT ACTIVIST
Elvira Arellano. Shell Marie Majury, Chicago, IL

Elvira Arellano has become a national symbol for illegal immigration, she is a single mother, an activist and a caregiver but is she a citizen? I will explain how Elvira Arellano is resisting the hegemony of continent and country through her identity as a caregiver. By juxtaposing the mythos of two recognizable American women, Malinche defining citizenship and Pocahontas denied, we can situate Elvira in her North American identity. By considering race and sexual politics perhaps we can better understand U.S. Immigration policy.

THE SPANISH DANCER AND THE DANCE: THE PERFORMANCE OF HEGemonic RESISTANCE IN LATINa MAGAZINE
Ramona Liera-Schwichtenberg, Wichita State University

Although white fashion magazines such as Elle may use similar ethnic representations, this paper examines how Latina Magazine's fashion lay-outs depict imagery that is coded as distinctively Latina. Within the fashion mainstream, Latina Magazine problematizes those stereotyped accoutrements of Latina femininity (such as hoop earrings) by re-presenting them in a resistive context that is grounded in demographic locations marked as Latino/a, evocative of a material history.

TABOO BODIES, OMNIPOTENT FLESH: VISUALLY TRANSLATING THE MISCEGENOUS BODY
Jeni Jenkins, University of Cincinnati

This project is an extension of a current Women’s Studies MA project on the social construction of miscegenous bodies. The aim is to translate the theories and literature on borderlands, ambiguous identities and mulatta identities into a series of artwork embodying the tensions of those who live life in the margins as hybrid identities. The paper portion philosophically expresses the displacement that exists for populations who occupy border identities within the socially constructed and rigid identity categories within hegemonic society. The poster will contain a presentation of 12 pieces of art created around resisting race, gender and class hegemonies.
THE PRO-ANA COMMUNITY: A CLOSER LOOK AT THE PERCEPTION OF SELF
Alaina Michele Stuard, Eastern Michigan University

The Pro-Ana Community: A Closer Look at the Perception of Self, is a content analysis put together from a pro-ana group online. It analyses and observes the content within these groups, and how young women cope amongst each other as well as individually with choosing to accept and live with an eating disorder. It allows further insight into the perception of self people have living with eating disorders and why they choose to seek an online group for support.

WOMEN OF COLOR: WE ARE ALL DIFFERENT
Shan Ye, University of Cincinnati
Marchena Silenny Ramirez, University of Cincinnati

Non-white women in U.S. are generally categorized as “women of color” regardless of the diversities of their nationality, race, cultural and religious background. This poster aims to challenge this white/non-white binary in U.S. by comparing the different policies on birth control, abortion, marriage law and LGBT issues in China and Costa Rica and how women in these two countries respond differently to these policies. These differences will help us to see what has been ignored and eliminated under the biased category and enable us to disturb and resist the white hegemony.

156. ROUND TABLE
NORTH: 200

This roundtable will address career paths to and from women’s centers. While many current women’s center professionals “fell into” women’s center work without having intentionally chosen a women’s center career, among our students and successors, a growing number aspire to women’s center positions and are taking steps to get there. Many current and future women’s center professionals may be looking to move “up” in the administrative ranks. Unlike faculty and other staff positions, however, the path to promotion is not always clear. This roundtable will seek to open the discussion of career paths to and from women’s centers.

157. PANEL
NORTH: 201

This panel offers three approaches and structured discussion of resistance to hegemonic discourses that interact to suppress women’s awareness and expressions of our experiences of gendered, racist and class violence. From communication comes a rhetorical analysis of the art and language created by sexual assault survivors through The Clothesline Project. From social psychology, one incident of aggression against a woman is examined to illustrate a fraternity’s peer accountability and student affairs staff’s responsibility. Through linguistic analyses of survivors’ language use, we investigate breaking silence, finding one’s voice and capitulating to or resisting masculine hegemonies.

How does feminist spirituality open spaces for activism both inside and outside the academy? This roundtable discussion brings the spiritual to the political through the intersection of feminism, spirituality, and activism in ritual, scholarship, and pedagogy. Interactive presentations examine how feminist activism can be found confronting hegemonies of race, class, and sexual politics in the boundaries and silences of interfaith dialogue, in the teaching of women’s spirituality in the Bible Belt, in feminist yoga and sacred singing practices, and in earth-centered matricial resistance to the US government’s Iraqi foreign policy.

This panel problematizes compartmentalizing feminism in activism and argues for an inclusive feminist movement that utilizes coalitions without diluting individual organization’s goals as a whole. Our papers explore this topic in the history of feminist activism marginalizing black women and lesbians, campus activist organizations focusing on one issue at a time while not dealing with other vital issues, and the gay rights movement prioritizing sexual orientation over gender identity. We draw on a transnational feminist framework for a solution of building non-hierarchical coalitions that strive to advance human rights as a whole.

NORTH: 205

This roundtable discussion of Women’s Studies graduate students will address the use, purpose, importance and dilemmas of feminist pedagogy. The presenters will address issues of race and class, integration of activism and/or service-learning, the idea of “academic freedom,” teaching while being a student, and using feminist pedagogy in secondary education and at technical/vocational colleges.

ANTI-PATRIARCHAL PEDAGOGY AND STUDENTS AT RISK: IMPLICATIONS FROM GENDER STUDIES SCHOLARSHIP
NORTH: 206
This roundtable is informed by germinal feminist pedagogical texts such as hooks' "Teaching to Transgress" and Luke and Gore's "Feminist Critical Pedagogies," both of which were published a decade and a half ago in the years before No Child Left Behind and state-mandated assessments. The presenters argue for and facilitate discussion on anti-patriarchal pedagogies for students considered "at risk" for successful college matriculation. The roundtable suggests the continued significance of anti-patriarchal pedagogies in a climate that does not address the social justice issues surrounding educational equity for students who have been short-changed by lack of cultural and economic capital.

FEMINIST SCIENCE STUDIES: FUTURE DIRECTIONS
NORTH: 208
The Science and Technology Taskforce put out an informal call to all feminist science studies scholars asking them to make attending NWSA 2008 a priority. In this roundtable, we will focus on the state of feminist science studies today and discuss strategies to strengthen its community of scholars and their scholarship.

FLUID BOUNDARIES: MOVING THROUGH AND BETWEEN THE ONLINE AND LIVE WOMEN'S STUDIES CLASSROOM
NORTH: 209
Feminist scholars, particularly third wave writers, posit that technology is the last patriarchal stronghold. Using technology in the women's studies classroom has the potential to assist women's movement into a position of empowerment through knowledge production and reproduction. This panel will examine the various ways in which technology is employed as pedagogical tool in the women's studies classroom, with particular attention to contrasts between live and online formats. In an effort to contribute to feminist pedagogy scholarship, presenters will compare the challenges and the triumphs of these formats, explore their liberatory potential, and address strategies for participatory environments.

CURRENT ISSUES IN TRANSNATIONAL FEMINISM: SOCIAL POLICY, UNIVERSALISM, POLITICS OF LOCATION, AND THE FUTURE OF FEMINISM
NORTH: 210
This panel consists of three feminist philosophers presenting papers on transnational feminism. One paper explores the influence of the United Nation on the development of sexual harassment law in Japan and of the UN and the European Union on the development of sexual harassment law in Turkey. Another explores the possibility of feminism without a defined "woman" at its center as a resolution to the problem of a global feminism. The third traces the historical emergence and recent change in the transnational feminist movement.

ANTI-RACIST & ANTI-HOMOPHOBIC WORK IN THE SOUTH: FEMINIST PEDAGOGIES OF RESISTANCE
NORTH: 212
The South is not always an easy environment in which to undertake scholarly or activist anti-racist and anti-homophobic work, and it can be even more difficult to raise these issues in the classroom. In this roundtable, presenters working in different fields borrow from Patricia Hill Collins' concept of intersectionality to discuss strategies for introducing feminism(s) and encouraging more complicated understandings of privilege to students at southern, primarily white, flagship universities. They will also discuss classroom activities, rooted in performative, activist, and hip hop pedagogies, which productively challenge students to revisit their resistance to texts that engender feminist, queer, and racial issues.

COMMUNITY FEMINIST'S ROLE IN UNIVERSITY WOMEN'S STUDIES PROGRAMS IN A EMERGING FEMINIST AND POST-FEMINIST ERAS
SOUTH: 230
For three and a half decades, feminists from the community have been instrumental in the formation of the Department of Women's Studies at this urban university. The proposed roundtable will look at how feminists in the community and the academy came together; how their collaboration has shaped the program; and how the trends at the university and in society have re-defined their relationship in the academy. Among the arguments that will be made is that the institutionalization of the program that assures feminist students and faculty greater opportunities has also re-defined the role of community advocates and financial supporters.

BLACK WOMEN NAVIGATING NARROW SPACES: PERFORMING ARTISTIC RESISTANCE THROUGH HIP-LIFE LYRICS, GOSPEL COMMUNITY AND FICTION WRITING.
SOUTH: 231

Using Audre Lorde’s discussion of the “erotic as power,” I will demonstrate how Youngblood’s first novel re-imagines desire through protagonist Mariah’s pansexual identity (freedom to love both men and women without labels). The powerful, creative energy within the erotic is one way to resist oppression. Youngblood creates space to imagine Black women’s sexuality free from constraining labels, such as “lesbian,” that many Black women writers of the 1970s-1980s claimed. Youngblood refuges the way we think about desire through Mariah’s defiance of heteronormative social scripts and re-imagination of healthy expressions of this powerful impulse so often repressed and punished.

RULES ARE MADE TO BE BROKEN: GENDERED, SEXED, AND RACED PRESCRIPTIONS FOR BELONGING TO NATION
SOUTH: 232

This session explores how the nation is produced and reproduced through the positioning of its most highly imagined citizens in one camp and the equally important positioning of its imagined undesirables in another. Mediated messages in the forms of film, television, and newspapers are primary symbolic tools of national normativity. By putting processes of normalization front and center, the authors of these papers attempt to understand how the linguistic, sociological, cultural, political and economic processes of nation-building are gendered and raced... Processes of inclusion and exclusion are key, and these papers grapple with the multiple meanings of the symbolic non-belonger.

THE M WORD: REAL MOTHERS IN CONTEMPORARY ART
SOUTH: 233

This panel will examine treatments of motherhood in popular culture and the visual arts. The three panelists will address the following topics in their papers: the dearth of interest in the topic of motherhood in feminist art and art criticism and the difficulty of presenting an exhibition of critical art work on the topic, the articulation and representation of queer motherhood through an examination of the photographic work of Catherine Opie, and two artist’s books that explore the ambivalence that comes from mothering a child in a foreign country.

RESISTING BIOMEDICAL HEGEMONIES: RETURNING THE GAZE ON RACIALIZED AND SEXUALIZED BODIES
SOUTH: 234

How do we confront racism, sexism, neoliberalism and homophobia in the discourses and practices of medicine and reproduction through our works as feminist science studies scholars? This panel brings together presenters from different disciplinary backgrounds including sociology, anthropology, history, cultural studies, and science and technology studies to compare and exchange analytical/theoretical approaches and strategies we use to identify and challenge biomedical hegemonies over women’s bodies. Topics include racial stereotyping in cervical cancer diagnosis, economic calculations of differential life worth, competing understandings of fetal development across race and class, racialized representations of IUD users, and literary/filmic portrayals of intersexuality and transsexuality.

FEMINIST RESISTANCE TO HEGEMONIC REPRESENTATIONS OF THE FEMALE
SOUTH: 235

Panel Abstract The panel will discuss feminist resistance to hegemonic artistic representations of femininity through a variety of venues such as feminist protest and art. These perspectives are argued through analysis of sexuality, race, and feminist reclaims of the female body. Panelists will specifically address the issues of redefining female sexuality by Queer feminist artists, creating female nude autonomy through the arts, critiquing dominant representations of the black female body in art, and offering opposition to patriarchal ideologies of war by black feminists.

SOUTH: 236

This panel examines the normative social category of mother in 20th and 21st century America and interrogates the patriarchal and heterosexist assumptions underlying the traditional construction of woman/mother. Together these papers critique the exclusionary view of what constitutes womanhood and motherhood and acknowledge women who stand outside the traditionally hegemonic mother trope, including queer mothers, mothers of color, surrogates, and child-free women.

LIVING BETWEEN THE LINES: BISEXUALITY AND THE EVERYDAY CONSEQUENCES OF CATEGORICAL THINKING
SOUTH: 238

There is little room for the existence of complex sexual identities, such as bisexuality, when sexual identities are so firmly rooted in dichotomous, categorical ways of thinking (Young 1990). Dualistic categorizations are not mere conceptualizations existing only in the theoretical realm; they have real-world consequences for those who personally and socially identify as bisexual. For bisexuals, the dualistic conceptualization of heterosexual/homosexual cannot reflect the variability of their bisexual identities and does not reflect the everyday realities of their lives.

SEX, FEAR, AND GENDER ROLES: NEW TRENDS IN TRANSGENDER STUDIES
WEST: 251

This panel session will discuss current research in the field of transgender studies. The first paper explores the fluid nature of gender roles and how self-identified transgender individuals have similar or different views as compared to two comparison groups. The second paper strives to validate a way to "know transphobia when we see it" and to look at gender differences when transphobia occurs. The final paper on this panel looks at the intersections of transgender and disability theory to reclaim the trans body as sexual and sexy.

AGAINST THE TIDE: FEMINIST RESISTANCE TO VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN IN TOLEDO, OH
WEST: 252

This roundtable introduces an array of feminist initiatives in Toledo, Ohio to resist violence against women. Educators, activists, lawyers and advocates will share their individual and collective experiences designing, organizing, implementing, evaluating and sustaining violence prevention efforts, ranging from traditional grass-roots actions such as Take Back the Night and street-level protests, to community forums, to government-sponsored empirical research, to policy change and reform. This roundtable offers an opportunity to share experiences that complicate the notion of what it means to resist hegemonies and reflect on how such experiences might translate to other local efforts to end violence against women.

Her dissertation entitled: The Possessive Investment in Consumption: The Projected Image and Invention of the Black feminine Body utilized discourse analysis to deconstruct (European) Western sciences, cultural imagery, popular media and discourse, as it related to the examination of four separate but related figures—“the Hottentot Venus”—Sara Baartman, “The Black Venus”—Josephine Baker, “The Video Vixen”, and “The Black Queer and Sanitized Drag Queen.

While at U of L Dr. Story has created four new courses, Black Lesbian Lives, Introduction to LGBTQ Studies, Black Feminisms in Action, and Queer Perspectives in Literature and Media. Her essay “Performing Venus: From Hottentot to Video Vixen: The Historical Legacy of Black Female Body Commodification”, which is a small portion of her dissertation is published as a chapter in the anthology Home Girls Make Some Noise: Hip Hop & Feminism edited by Aisha S. EDUCATING OTHERS: CONNECTING THE DOMESTIC & INTERNATIONAL STAKES OF RACE, GENDER, SEXUALITY AND U.S. NATION-MAKING
The political context of the 21st century United States has been dominated on the global front by a war in the Middle East that many argue is evidence of U.S. imperialism and on the domestic front by neo-liberal economic and social policies not the least of which is the continued state-by-state dismantling of Affirmative Action programs in education. Forging connections between the local, national and international politics of race, gender, sexuality and nation-making we emphasize a transnational feminist lens as one analytical tool that foregrounds how what happens ‘at home’ is always informing and informed by what happens ‘over there.’

In response to the shifting construction of gender and citizenship that migration poses, migrant women engage in various forms of “patriarchal bargains” to sustain their lives. By bringing together feminist research grounded in distinct locations including Pakistan, Korea, and Vietnam, this session interrogates how gender, race, caste, and class converge in the bodies of migrant women, constructing and contesting the notion of nation, belonging, and citizenship.

WHAT'S THE REAL DEAL ABOUT MASCULINITY?: EVALUATION FINDINGS, AND STUDENT PERFORMANCES FROM SOCIAL STUDIES-BASED SEX EDUCATION (PANEL)
SOUTH: 231
What's the REAL DEAL about masculinity? The program evaluation of a social studies based sex education curriculum provides a case study of how classrooms in mostly African-American high schools in Cleveland were converted into empowering discursive spaces exploring fatherhood; strength, power, and violence; and sexuality and intimate relationships; race and poverty. Findings from student and teacher surveys, classroom observations, and teacher interviews provide strong support for an intersectional, social studies approach to sex education, and for the enduring power of Collins' matrix of domination. The scholarly presentations are interspersed with moving performances that students wrote as part of this program.

TROUBLING REPRESENTATIONS OF TRAUMA: READING AIMEE & JAGUAR, IN THE MORNING, AND THE MAGDALENE SISTERS

SOUTH: 232

The objective of this panel is to interrogate the cinematic representations of trauma and their linkages to confrontations with the state. Utilizing Anne Cvetkovich’s recent scholarship on affect and trauma each of the papers in our panel allows us to contribute to on-going debates across postcolonial, gender and sexuality studies. This enables us to investigate trauma to provide insights into the bodily governance of subjects. While our conclusions vary, the papers argue that each film is a political project- filling the gap where marginal experiences of trauma were previously unrecognized.

REFUTING CURRENT MYTHS ABOUT GENDER EQUITY AND EDUCATION
SOUTH: 236

While many feminists work in education, they often inadvertently reinforce misunderstandings about the status of, and solutions for, advancing gender equity in education. This panel will refute some myths or misconceptions related to Title IX, teachers, athletics, diverse populations, and women's studies. Much of the evidence will come from the 2007 Handbook for Achieving Gender Equity through Education and Equal Play: Title IX and Social Change. This session will focus on formal and informal roles of women's studies students and faculty in promoting accurate knowledge and good solutions to increase gender equity in all levels of education for diverse populations.

COMPLICATING IMAGES OF SUCCESS ON THE ‘TWO-WAY STREET’ BETWEEN FEMINISM AND SCIENCE EDUCATION
SOUTH: 237

In this panel, our goal is to complicate images of success on the 'two-way street' between women's studies and science education by critically examining the goal of 'inclusivity'. We suggest that the singular logic of inclusivity (employed to assess the success of the 'two-way street') may, in fact, hamper efforts to resist hegemony - particularly with regard to race, gender and sexuality - within scientific and technical education. Presenting five, brief-site-based explorations of the potential risks of the logic of inclusivity, we seek to promote discussion regarding alternative meanings of success for feminist interventions in scientific and technical education.

COMPOSING EMBODIED FEMINIST SPACES: A PRESENTATION IN SEVERAL VOICES
SOUTH: 238

Women's Studies has aligned itself pedagogically and theoretically with issues of embodiment. We place students and their learning processes at the center of our teaching. Our scholarship champions the development of ever-expanding bodies of knowledge. This panel interrogates the literal and figurative spaces we inhabit as teachers, students, and scholars by examining the mestiza rhetoric of Gloria Anzaldua, the (re)fashioning of the self through racial/cultural/gender signifiers, and the inter-subjectivity of student/teacher relations. The interactive design of the presentation -- a polylog -- demonstrates how matters of race, identity, and selfhood are delivered by and made manifest in embodied forms.

CONTESTS WITHIN NORTH AMERICAN FEMINISM: 2ND AND 3RD WAVE ACTIVISM
NORTH: 200

This panel will deal with the dissension between 2nd and 3rd wave feminist activists in Canada and the United States. Scholars have documented the contesting of feminism between feminists coming of age in the 1960s and 1970s and feminists coming of age in the 1990s and 21st century. This panel will explore the perceptions of “hegemonic” feminism by younger feminists and “apolitical” feminism by older feminists in the movement by examining a variety of contests including dress and appearance norms, forms of activism, gender and mentoring in feminist organizations.

PROFESSORIAL EMBODIMENTS: REFLECTIONS ON GENDER, SIZE AND CRITICAL PEDAGOGY IN THE CLASSROOM
NORTH: 207

This panel explores the issues of fatness and gender in the university classroom. Often, instructors are taught to downplay their own subjectivity, embodiment and emotions in the classroom. Feminism has interrogated this view and allowed for attentiveness to body, identity and feeling in educational settings. These papers explore the teaching of size-related topics, the embodiment of the instructor and the renewed need for emotion and personal interaction between teacher and student. In addition, it stresses effective methods for teaching the tenets of fat and feminist liberation in diverse classroom settings.

SPIRITUALISM AND TRADITION: BETWEEN A ROCK AND A HARD PLACE
NORTH: 209

Our panel builds on recent feminist scholarship on spirituality and traditionalism, which is often entangled with essentialism and dismissed by much of feminist theory. Thus, we are working in two directions: we consider how spirituality and traditionalism may be conceptualized as non-essentialist and we explore how these notions may be used as a springboard for feminist analysis. Yet, how can we engage these categories as non-essentialist without emptying them of their meaning? And if we can develop meaningful non-essentialist conceptions, what possibilities does spirituality and traditionalism offer feminist analysis without falling back onto static conceptions of identity and culture?

TEACHING WHAT YOU ARE TO THOSE WHO ARE (PROBABLY) NOT: OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES FOR LGBTQ PROFESSORS IN THE CLASSROOM
NORTH: 210

For LGBTQ people, the question of “being out” is often a persistent and frequently lifelong one. For LGBTQ teachers/professors it is often a particularly challenging and complex question. A myriad of considerations impact how, when, and if an LGBTQ professor is explicitly “out” in the classroom. This sponsored-session roundtable will draw from the firsthand experiences of LGBTQ faculty/staff/former students to provide strategies for dealing effectively with this persistent and ever-present question, a question that is not only personal and political but also pedagogical.

FEMINIST ACTIVISM FROM THE INSIDE OUT: CONNECTING CAMPUS TO COMMUNITY
NORTH: 212

In this roundtable, undergraduate students from the Women in Learning and Leadership (WILL) program will discuss the ways they are connecting feminist theory to practice in metropolitan Detroit through their support work with local inmates at correctional facilities, with domestic violence survivors at a local shelter, and with at-risk Latina youth in Southwest Detroit. Through these projects, the students incorporate analytical insights such as the intersectionality of race, class and gender to create dynamic programs for social change in their communities.

ENVISIONING RACIAL AND GENDER EQUALITY & INCLUSION IN WOMEN’S STUDIES RESEARCH & PROGRAMS: A CONTINUING CONVERSATION
SOUTH: 230

In what ways can we apply the vision of the early feminist pioneers — some of whom overcame inherent racism in their society and some who did not — to modern-day efforts to continue the conversation about racial and gender equality? How can we make a difference in academic and other teaching/research institutions with respect to changing perceptions and acceptance of various categories of difference including sexual orientation, class and ethnicity? This panel applies lessons from the past to the challenges of achieving racial, gender, economic and sexual equality for women in the present.

“FEMINIST RETELLINGS/RETELLING FEMINISM: DETERRITORIALIZING NARRATIVE”
SOUTH: 231

This panel addresses the implications of particular feminist retellings and the retelling of feminism in four texts: Joyce Carol Oates’ First Love, the star persona of performer Tori Amos, Sandra Cisneros’ short story “Barbie-Q,” and Lourdes Portillo’s documentary “Señorita Extraviada.” We explore how the deployment of feminist paradigms hold the potential to reframe women’s experiences and cultural productions as well as textual and theoretical interventions in imagining feminism though itself. Without relinquishing the historical and social specificity of the texts themselves, we consider how narrative acts as a staging ground for challenging the epistemological regimes that dictate contemporary feminist paradigms.

THE DESTRUCTIVE HEGEMONY OF WESTERN BEAUTY CULTURE
SOUTH: 232

Based on women’s narratives analyzed using relational-cultural theory (RCT), panelists will expose how hegemonic Western culture insidiously influences women of all ages, ethnicities, and disabilities to try to conform to male-and-media-engendered beauty culture norms. The pressure on women to project youthful, slender, beautiful images sets up conflict between women, jeopardizing the very woman-woman relationships that are essential to creativity and well-being.

“MONEY, CASH, HOES:” DECONSTRUCTING REPRESENTATIONS OF RACE, CLASS, GENDER AND SEXUALITY IN MAINSTREAM MEDIA
SOUTH: 234

We are interested in intersections of race and class in portrayals of women and men in mass media which allow for both perpetuation of dominant ideologies and resistance to them. An examination of sexuality in Sex in the City shows that these representations can be seen as both hegemonic and non-normative. A deconstruction of the sexual and racial politics of Britney Spears shows how she resists notions of normative white femininity and motherhood. Finally, an ethnographic study of how teenagers interpret hip hop videos reveals that race and class intersect with gender to challenge the simplistic notion of male supremacy.

This panel explores the over arching themes of conceptual, symbolic, and physical dislocation, as well as feminist responses in the United States to such dislocation, through three interrelated topics: sex trafficking, the use of women as justification for war, and the experiences of Latina immigrant women. Each paper takes up the theme of crossing physical and conceptual boundaries, or borders, and the dangers that certain forms of boundary crossing pose for women, such as sex trafficking, immigration, and the rhetorical positioning/"othering" of women as victims in need of rescue via military conflict.

The purpose of the panel is to show some of the ways in which women have resisted the hegemonic white male model of the presidential candidate, voter, confidant and advisor, and how African American women have used political involvement with presidents as a stepping stone for leadership in their communities and to attain more power for their constituents.

IDA: A SWORD AMONG LIONS
by Paula J. Giddings

Amistad (2008)

In the tradition of towering biographies that tell us as much about America as they do about their subject, IDA: A Sword Among Lions is a sweeping narrative about a country and a crusader embroiled in the struggle against lynching: a practice that imperiled not only the lives of black men and women, but also a nation based on law and race.

At the center of the national drama is Ida B. Wells (1862-1931), born to slaves in Mississippi, who began her activist career by refusing to leave a first-class ladies’ car on a Memphis railway and rose to lead the nation’s first campaign against lynching. For Wells the key to the rise in violence was embedded in attitudes not only about black men but about women and sexuality as well. Her independent perspective and percussive personality gained her encomiums as a hero — as well as aspersions on her character and threats of death. Exiled from the South by 1892, Wells subsequently took her campaign across the country and throughout the British Isles before she married and settled in Chicago, where she continued her activism as a journalist, suffragist, and independent candidate in the rough-and-tumble world of the Windy City’s politics.

The irrepressible personality of Ida B. Wells surges out of the pages. With meticulous research and vivid rendering of her subject, Giddings also provides compelling portraits of twentieth-century progressive luminaries, black and white, with whom Wells worked during some of the most tumultuous periods in American history. Embattled all of her activist life, Wells found herself fighting not only conservative adversaries but icons of the civil rights and women’s suffrage movements who sought to undermine her place in history.

In this definitive biography, which places Ida B. Wells firmly in the context of her times as well as ours, Giddings at long last gives this visionary reformer her due and, in the process, sheds light on an aspect of our history that is often left in the shadows.

SWINGING BACK TO CENTER: BALANCING JUDGMENT AND EMPATHY WITHIN THE WOMEN'S STUDIES CLASSROOM AND IN THE FEMINIST WORLD BEYOND
NORTH: 210

Recent popular feminist analysis seems to fall into two camps, crudely put "the judgers" - who argue that there are feminist choices, feminist ways to live, and The "Includers," who worry that feminism keeps women from embracing the movement's rather un-controversial mission of equality and choice. This same imbalance is mirrored in classrooms across America. So how do we—women's studies professors, feminist thinkers, writers, and activists—articulate a concrete vision of the most feminist way to live, but also have empathy for the motivation and psychology of others? How can we move feminism forward, without alienating its future?

YOUNG WOMEN AND THE 2008 ELECTIONS: VOTE AS IF YOUR LIFE DEPENDS ON IT!
NORTH: 211

Race and gender issues will play a critical role in the 2008 elections. This panel will explore the significance of young women voters in the upcoming elections, present research on recent trends in young women's voting, examine the barriers they face, and strategies for increasing participation in the elections. The panel will also examine the critical issues at stake in the 2008 elections, including state ballot measures to ban affirmative action and restrict women's access to abortion. Participants will learn about the Get Out HER Vote Campaign and strategies for mobilizing more young women voters on college campuses.

What are the effects of migration and diasporic identities in reproductive health? Women's immigration to the US from Haiti, Mexico, and Central America will be explored using different theoretical models including transnational, Third World, and postcolonial feminisms, as well as queer theory.

EXPLORING RACIALIZED LATINIDADES: MUJERES FROM HIGHER EDUCATION TO THE GLOBAL NATION
SOUTH: 230

This panel presentation offers four approaches to understanding the racialized and classed lives of Latinas. We examine the experiences of Afro-Latinas, Dominicans, and Chicanas. We do this first through the perspective of higher education, as we share our research about student activism and our experiences as educators/students in predominantly white classrooms. OBJECTS OF HISTORY: FEMINISM, BODIES, AND KNOWLEDGE
SOUTH: 232

This panel revisits and reimagines dominant narratives that structure how the past is seen, understood, and confronted. All the papers attempt to write ambivalent histories that challenge the necessity of cohesion for representation and that grapple with the role events play as starting points of narrative history. Rather than disavowing and repudiating concepts such as origins, representation, and identity, we revisit such concepts precisely because they appear to play such a central and critical role in the formation of identities and communities within and across feminist politics and scholarship.

AID AND AID: GENDER, RACE, MEDIA AND PRO-WOMAN SOLUTIONS
SOUTH: 233

By use of media theory in conjunction with a transnational feminist analytic, I present a case-study of gender representation and welfare programming in the United States media. I demonstrate the ways in which a neocolonial frame is active in mass media portraits of women and poverty, particularly women marginalized by race or ethnicity, and perpetuates negative stereotypes. More specifically; this essay is a comparative-analysis of image and story-line portrayal of Latina females within the constructs of mass media, concluding with some pro-women concept and perspective application.

Feminists employ reasoning in support of their own resistance to hegemony, and face hegemonic reasoning that resists feminist perspectives. Our discussion employs feminist science and technology studies, feminist epistemology, feminist pedagogy, and feminist psychoanalytic discussion. Discussing how to use reason against hegemony will focus on racialized and sexualized views of the body, and taking responsibility for technological privilege that comes with global economic dominance. Discussing how to address hegemonic reasoning will address both the resistance faced from those in power, and suggest techniques from the ancient theory of fallacies that help address hegemonic forms of reasoning.

RURAL WOMEN NEGOTIATING POWER: FULBRIGHT SCHOLAR RESEARCH IN PANAMA, CAMEROON, CHINA AND NEPAL
NORTH: 208
Four recent Fulbright Scholars from different institutions will present research on women's experience with negotiating power relationships around the globe. Presentations will discuss the environmental conditions of women's empowerment in Panama, the struggles of women living in poverty in Cameroon, rural women's experience of NGOs in contemporary China, and the use of storytelling by marginalized women in Nepal.

Betty J. Harris, University of Oklahoma
Ines S. Shaw, Nassau Community College-SUNY
This session highlights some of the data from NWSA’s data collection project, and invites panelists to respond to questions about the field. For example, NWSA’s data shows that women’s studies programs serve vast numbers of students through general education courses, while the number of majors is relatively small in comparison.

Other data revealed includes:

With generous support from The Ford Foundation, NWSA partnered with the National Opinion Research Center to conduct its national survey. Some key results from the data are listed below:

- There are 652 women’s and gender studies programs at community colleges, colleges, and universities in the U.S. based upon survey responses
- Undergraduate women’s studies courses enrolled nearly 89,000 students in 2005-06, and 85% of women’s and gender studies courses fulfilled general education requirements
- Undergraduate majors enrolled nearly 4,300 students, while undergraduate minors enrolled nearly 10,500 students in 2005-06
- Graduate courses had a total enrollment of nearly 2,700, with 1,076 students registered in doctoral courses in 2005-06
- 30.4% of women’s studies faculty are faculty of color, compared with 19% of faculty nationally based upon a National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) 2003 report on post-secondary faculty at degree-granting institutions.

What challenges and opportunities do these numbers suggest?

DIANE HARRIFORD, VASSAR COLLEGE

Diane Harriford is Associate Professor of Sociology and Director of Women’s Studies at Vassar College. For the last twenty years, she has been teaching sociology, Women’s Studies, and African American Studies while engaging in various social movements. In the 1970s, she was an assistant to Bella Abzug, a member of the US House of Representatives from New York. Diane also worked closely with the Coalition of Labor Union Women. Currently, Diane is involved in the National Women’s Studies Association and the Black Radical Congress. Diane has spoken widely on women and slavery in the 19th century, on Black women and sexuality, and Black women in the academy. Most recently she has spoken in Brazil on the rise of Black conservatives in the United States and on Hurricane Katrina in Tunisia.

Her forthcoming book When the Center Is on Fire: Passionate Social Theory for Our Times, (University of Texas Press) coauthored with Becky Thompson uses classical social thinkers- W. E. B. Du Bois, Max Weber, Karl Marx, and emile Durkheim- to understand a series of twenty-first century social traumas, including the massacre at Columbine High School, the 9/11 attacks, the torture at Abu Ghaib prison, and Hurricane Katrina. The authors assert that classical social theorists grappled with the human condition in ways that remain profoundly relevant. They show, for example, that the loss of double consciousness that Du Bois identified in African Americans enabled political elites to turn a blind eye to the poverty and vulnerability of many of New Orleans’s citizens.

The authors’ compelling, sometimes irreverent, often searing interpretations make this book essential reading for students, activists, generations X, Y, and Z, and everybody bored by the 6 o’clock news.
Sheila Hassell Hughes, University of Dayton

Sheila Hassell Hughes is Associate Professor, Department of English, at the University of Dayton, and is the director of the Women's and Gender Studies Program. She holds an interdisciplinary Ph.D. in Women's Studies from Emory University. After a post-graduate year as visiting faculty at Emory, she joined UD's English Department in 1998. In 2004 she began directing the Women's Studies Program and helped establish a new major.

Mary Margaret Fonow, Arizona State University

Mary Margaret Fonow, Professor and Director, Women and Gender Studies, joined the ASU faculty in 2004. She provides national leadership for the research training of doctoral students in the field of women and gender studies.

Her research interests include feminist methodology, transnational labor rights, and social movements. She is the author of Union Women: Forging Feminism In The United Steelworkers Union. Fonow has conducted comparative research on workplace change in U.S., Canada and Australia and has recently concluded a study of women's transnational labor activism in male dominated unions in the metal trades. Her new work focuses on the reformulation of labor rights and women's rights as human rights and on the intersections between movements for sexuality rights and economic justice.

She has served on the editorial boards of Gender & Society, NWSA Journal, Frontiers, and the Australian Journal of Sociology. Fonow is a member of the UNESCO Women and Gender Research Network and serves on the Governor's Commission on the Prevention of Violence against Women for the state of Arizona.

Dr. Hughes is active in the National Women's Studies Association (NWSA), and she has served since 1999 as Associate Editor for North America for Literature and Theology, a scholarly journal published by Oxford University Press. She is also a member of the Association for the Study of American Indian Literatures (ASAIL) and the Modern Languages Association (MLA).

Her research interests include: the intersections of gender, ethnicity, and religion in American Indian women's writing; Louise Erdrich; religion and literature; feminist theory; and women and religion. She is currently co-writing a book about the representation of religion in Louise Erdrich's work.

Yi-Chun Tricia Lin, Southern Connecticut State University

Yi-Chun Tricia Lin is Professor, Director of Women's Studies at Southern Connecticut State University.

A fifteenth-generation daughter of Taiwan, Yi-Chun Tricia Lin traveled oceans and continent, from her native island, to pursue a doctoral degree in continental philosophy and literary theory. In the process, she found ethnic studies and women's studies.

Her dissertation, “Translating Cultures as Re-Writing Boundaries” (1997), is a study of selected Asian American women’s cultural and literary productions. Since, her research and teaching interests have gone intensely into ethnic studies, women's studies and post-colonial studies. Among her most recent projects is a comparative cultural studies of women's writing from the Caribbean and Pacific islands.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF MARXIST-HUMANISM TO STRUGGLES AGAINST SEXISM, RACISM, HOMOPHOBIA, AND GLOBALIZED CAPITALISM
NORTH: 210
This workshop will explore the relationship of Marx’s theory as a catalyst for struggles for freedom against racism, gender oppressions, and globalized capitalism. It will ask and try to answer: can a gender-based analysis that ignores class fight the hegemonies we live under?; does a class-based analysis help fight the totality of oppressions existing in 21st Century capitalism?; and lastly, does the philosophy of Marxist-Humanism developed by Raya Dunayevskaya forward contemporary struggles of race and gender oppression – not as something to be added to Marxism, but as integral to the philosophy?

WALKING OUR TALK: RESISTING ACADEMIC HEGEMONY/ENACTING FEMINIST PEDAGOGY
NORTH: 211
Resisting the hegemony of the patriarchal academic pedagogical structure, feminist pedagogy works to transgress the boundaries of who is “teacher” and who is “learner,” creating participatory spaces for the sharing and creation of knowledge. This roundtable will focus on the possibilities of power sharing in a co-taught women’s studies classroom. The presenters of this interactive roundtable are eager to discuss why we might recognize the value of feminist pedagogy, power sharing, and the dismantling of the academic hierarchy in theory, and yet have trouble putting those theories into practice.

RESISTING LGBTQ HEGEMONIES: CRITIQUING, EXPANDING, AND RE-VISIONING
SOUTH: 233

From multiple vantage points, the panelists examine, disrupt, and resist the multiple and interlocking hegemonies of race, class, gender, and sexuality within and outside queer communities. The authors explore multiple forms of resistance - critically interrogating the racialization of homo-normativity through a Blackface drag performer, deconstructing the hegemony of “the LGBTQ community” by emphasizing fluidity and cultivating accountability, making visible Latina lesbian activism and history as re-vision of LGBTQ, and evoking a black and queer utopia through the innovative music of Meshell Ndegeocello. Each speak to the need for trans-forming our constructed identities and communities.

This panel focuses on the adaptation and incorporation of feminist science studies for use in teaching undergraduate students in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) courses, as well as adapting and incorporating STEM topics for use in women’s and gender studies. The panel provides an overview of issues in this process, empirical tools to capture stereotypes and measure the effects of interventions, and examples of materials and information that can be “transferred.” In addition, the panel includes preliminary results from a survey of 1,200 undergraduate students about their stereotypes of scientists in relation to their interests in science careers.

Panelists will engage this issue from within historically specific geopolitical terrain, using feminist methodology that troubles the subject/object model of scholarship and takes seriously embodied knowledge. In addition to an analysis of hegemonic Western understandings of “normal,” “deviant,” and “liberated” sexual identities and practices, the panel will also include an investigation of decolonial reimaginings of sexual and gender subjectivities within U.S. communities of color and colonized communities of the global south.

RESIST THIS! FORMS OF RESISTANCE TO HETERO-NORMATIVE GENDER CONSTRUCTION SOUTH: 238

Five graduate students explore everyday forms of resistance to heteronormative gender construction. Drawing from bell hooks, these students aim to translate theories into everyday resistance by exploring women’s choice to not have children, ecofeminism, trans-gender identity, feminine identity and art. By working together, these students hope to make connections between these different forms of resistance, seeking to provide a range of resistance in everyday life.

"CULTURE, COURTESY, COURAGE: WOMEN'S LITERARY CLUBS IN TURN-OF-THE-CENTURY ARKANSAS"
Sarah B. Rowley, Indiana University

My presentation demonstrates the widespread prevalence of women's literary clubs across the state of Arkansas at the turn of the twentieth century. Literary clubs thrived everywhere in American society, among rural, urban, young, and old women alike. As part of a larger national women's club movement, these organizations were important gathering places for women where they engaged in self-education, fostered female relationships, altered the public space of their communities, and performed their gender, race, and class identities. These organizations politicized middle-class women while maintaining a devotion to the nineteenth century ideal of domesticity.

"ABUSE-REACTIVE CHILDREN: CAUGHT WITHIN THE MATRIX OF DOMINATION"
Julia Carol Davenport, The University of Cincinnati

My poster addresses abuse-reactive children as created by, and caught within, the "matrix of domination." Parallels between abusive ways adults embody the matrix of domination in terms of gender norms, power dynamics, and sexuality norms will be made clear. The consequential creation of abuse reactive children who then become perpetrators of sexual violence against their own peers will be analyzed in relation to the matrix of domination. I will draw from authors such as Hendrika B. Cantwell in order to propose a reeducation of the American and global public consciousness in relation to the growing number of abuse reactive children.

"CHOICES AND REGRET: A NARRATIVE ANALYSIS OF ABORTION IDEOLOGY IN THE NEWS"
Melissa N Miller, Georgia State University

This narrative analysis of a three-part news series broadcast on KPBS in San Diego examines the story that news media can tell about abortion in America. Narratives are meaning-making structures and representations from which others develop their own interpretations. An examination of the abortion narrative in this series can tell us about the dominant social discourse around the issue, as well as its implications for shaping public perceptions and policy.

"DISCOVERING SOURCES OF WOMEN'S SEXUAL SELF-EFFICACY"
Lauren Sherwood Carothers, Washington University in St. Louis

How do women get what they want out of sexual relationships? Is the hook-up culture toxic for women? Where do women derive their sources of sexual self-efficacy? Through a review of the current literature and the use of surveys and open-ended interviews, this paper explores those sources that augment women's sexual self-efficacy, as well as the sources that pose a significant danger to a young woman's developing sexual confidence.

COVER OUR PILLS: CONTRACEPTIVE EQUITY AT A UNIVERSITY IN OHIO
Michele Grim, University of Toledo

In spring 2006, four students at a university in Ohio has recently fought and won a fight for contraceptive equity. These students lobbied university leadership for the fair representation of women's health in the student health insurance plan. The student health insurance plan covered contraceptives that were "medically necessary," a definition that was vague when asked what constitutes as "medically necessary." By the Spring of 2007, these students hosted a forum with a prominent state senator, lobbied university leadership and successfully won the fight to cover contraceptives in the student health insurance plan.

FEMME SEXUALITY: A HIDDEN DISCOURSE IN LESBIAN EROTICA
Abi Weissman, San Francisco State University

My project is to investigate the hidden discourse of femme sexuality in written lesbian erotica. I describe the historical context of femme sexuality in the United States. Social psychological theorists help to explore how identity is created through interpersonal interaction; feminist and sexuality theorists illuminate femme lesbian sexuality, discourses, and dichotomous relationships. I provide a critical analysis of stories in the Best Lesbian Erotica (BLE) series, volumes 1996 through 2002. Specifically, I explore when authors label characters as femme and when they do not. I conclude that femme sexuality exists within the BLE series. Further research is needed.

HUMAN TRAFFICKING AND WOMEN'S STRENGTHS PERSPECTIVE
Neely Mahapatra, Austin, TX

The State Department estimates provide an illustration of the possible scope of human trafficking. According to the most recent Trafficking in Persons Report (U.S. Department of State, 2006), between 600,000 and 800,000 people are trafficked internationally each year. Women comprise 80 percent of trafficking victims and are forced into prostitution, domestic servitude, or other labor industries and are denied basic human rights. At the same time trafficked women seem to have the greatest resiliency to survive and succeed in the new environment. This paper highlights the strengths angle of these survivors in the light of feminist perspective.

INVISIBLE SOLDIERS, INVISIBLE STUDENTS: WOMEN VETERANS IN THE GENDER/WOMEN'S STUDIES CLASSROOM
Brynne Renee Morningstar, Eastern Oregon University

Drawing from personal experience as a veteran and a returning Gender Studies student, I explore the positive and negative issues that surround women veterans joining WS and Gender courses and programs. I focus on effects that can impact student/professor interactions and student performance in and outside of the classroom. By exploring how the causality, symptoms and treatments for women with combat-related posttraumatic stress disorder may differ from those for men, I argue for more research in finding ways to help women adjust to academic life after war and query, "Is Feminism both most willing and most challenged by this research agenda?"

MARXIST-HUMANISM--RAYA DUNAYEVSKAYA'S DEVELOPMENT OF AN ORIGINAL PHILOSOPHY
Terry Moon, News & Letters

In pictures and text, this poster would trace the life and work of the revolutionary woman philosopher, Raya Dunayevskaya (1910-1987), highlighting her break from Leon Trotsky in 1939, developing the theory of state capitalism in 1941, and concentrating on her development of an original philosophy she called Marxist-Humanism. The poster would forward Dunayevskaya's considerable work with women revolutionaries and with the contemporary women's movement. It would show how in Marxist-Humanism, Dunayevskaya saw women's struggles for freedom were not something that had to be added on to Marxism, but were integral to what Marx called "revolution in permanence."

MOTHERING OUTSIDE THE BOX: WOMEN, COMMUNITY AND ALTERNATIVE MATERNITY
Renea C. Frey, Northern Kentucky University

Resisting the predominant paradigm regarding the practices of mothering, a diverse group of women in the Cincinnati area have self-created community to offer resources and support for transconventional maternal and parenting choices. Despite contradictory messages, social pressures and dichotomous views of mothering, women in community find empowerment to make autonomous choices regarding noninstitutional birthing methods, childrearing modalities and educational options.

PROBING THE FEMINIST CANON: A STUDY OF ANAIS NIN'S EROTICA
Angela Megan Carter, Truman State University

Anaïs Nin's diaries are hailed for their insight into women's sexuality. Still, similar elements within her erotica, Little Birds and Delta of Venus, have been overlooked. Nin prefaces the collection saying it presents sexuality from "a woman's perspective," yet her female characters seem alarmingly coherent with patriarchal stereotypes. They are either power-hungry whores or innately non-sexual. This dichotomy leads scholars to see Nin's erotica as misogynistic. However, it is through this troublesome dichotomy that Nin explores the complexities of female sexual identity. Thus no embarrassment to her legacy, Nin's erotica too has a place in the feminist literary canon.

REACHING OUT FOR LIBERATION: EXPANDING IDEAS OF FEMINIST ACTIVISM IN THE GLOBAL SOUTH
Risa C. Whitson, Ohio University

In this poster, I examine the trajectory of El Ceibo, a cooperative of garbage scavengers in Buenos Aires, from a grassroots organization of women to an important player in the politics of urban waste. I argue that El Ceibo, while not self-identifying as an organization focused on gender or women, is successfully implementing many of the most radical components of gender and development (GAD) theory. The results of this research suggest that feminist scholars should more seriously engage "non-feminist" grassroots organizations, such as El Ceibo, as they may provide models from which we can further connect GAD theory and praxis.

RESISTING GENDER BIAS IN TECHNOLOGY: TRANSFORMING A GATEWAY COURSE IN ENGINEERING
Sue V. Rosser, Georgia Tech
Science and technology remain a white male bastion in the U.S. Many students from underrepresented groups who initially desire to major in engineering and technology, lose interest and confidence after taking the introductory gate-keeping courses. This poster depicts a $900,000 National Science Foundation (NSF) funded project to transform the gateway course to most majors in engineering, Statics, to make it more attractive to women and to men of color.

REVOLTING BODIES: A CASE STUDY IN TEACHING ABOUT EMBODIMENT IN A WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES CLASSROOM
April Michelle Herndon, Winona State University
Using literature on feminist pedagogy, feminist analyses of corporeality, and the results of semester-long surveys administered in an upper-level Women's and Gender Studies course on embodiment, this presentation will explore the possibilities and challenges of teaching in ways that influence how young women think about embodiment and strategies for resisting hegemonic corporeal norms.

SOUTH ASIAN WOMEN AND DOMESTIC VIOLENCE: INCIDENCE AND FORMAL AND INFORMAL HELP-SEEKING
Neely Mahapatra, Austin, TX
South Asian immigrant communities in the United States have their own sociocultural expression of violence against women. These communities include immigrants from countries including India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, the majority being from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh (Rudrappa, 2004; Sheehan et al., 2000). This study aims to increase understanding of help-seeking behavior patterns of South Asian women experiencing domestic violence in the United States, including utilization of informal/personal networks and formal/outside agencies. A primary objective is to identify sociocultural factors that promote or inhibit formal and informal help seeking.

THE CLOSETED CRIME OF LGBT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE
Kimberly M. Adams, SUNY Brockport
Domestic violence is a crime that attacks the very place where people feel safe - their homes. Current focus has been on heterosexual relationships; however this problem also affects LGBT relationships. Even though law enforcement and legal system responses have improved with better training, less reliance on short term corrective action, and community awareness, the converse is true in LGBT domestic violence situations. This poster focuses on five areas of LGBT domestic violence: (1) its definition; (2) its recognition; (3) similarities/differences to heterosexual domestic violence; (4) law enforcement/legal system responses; and (5) support of victims and survivors.

THE RELIGIOUS ASPECTS AND INFLUENCES ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE: THE MISSING LINK?
Jessica Suzzane Hickey, University of North Carolina Charlotte
Domestic violence is a public health issue faced by the vast majority of race, class, and ethnic groups across the globe. More and more research is being done to discover both the causes and the outcomes of domestic violence. However, there is little research being pursued examining the religious tenets that may harbor the innate roots of domestic violence. Many mainstream religions are set up in patriarchal systems, which may consciously or unconsciously advocate domestic violence. This paper will analyze gendered-practices in religion that create or amplify subtle, abusive, and grievous forms of domestic violence.

TRANSNATIONAL FEMINIST PEDAGOGY AND PUBLICATION IN COSTA RICA
Beth Martin Birky, Goshen College
This poster will convey the connection between the principles of transnational feminism and an international Women's Studies course at a liberal arts college. By considering some of the issues encountered in transnational feminism, this course resulted in a student/faculty publishing project on women's organizations in the Monteverde region of Costa Rica.

WRITING THE BODY IN RED INK: A BODY-POLITICS OF HUNGER-STRIKING IN THE EARLY 20TH CENTURY BRITISH SUFFRAGETTE MOVEMENT
Kathryn Oliviero, University of California, Los Angeles
Embodied performance can eloquently explicate the material impact of inequalities, illuminate the assumptions upon which they rest, and generate cultural and political change. The hunger-striking suffragettes are one entry point from which to explore a feminist genealogy of embodied performance activism. The corporeal nature of their starvation tactics (dys)embodied their personal stake in enfranchisement - embodied why it mattered through pain - by materializing the impact of disenfranchisement and the feminine norms of lack, domesticity and docility upon which they depended. The body became an alternative text through which to trace, contest, and communicate the anatomy of their political status.

A DECADE OF RESEARCH: WHAT HAVE WE LEARNED ABOUT AGING LESBIANS?
Paige E. Averett, East Carolina University

This paper will review the past 10 years of academic literature on aging lesbians. Building on the work of Gabbay & Wahler (2002) we find a continued lack of research on aging lesbian issues. As well, the research community continues to collapse the gay and lesbian experience into one rather than respecting the unique experience of being lesbian and growing old. Aging lesbians as a population deserve specific focus and knowledge as they are a group that experiences at a minimum, the triple threat of marginalization.

SEXUALITY IN POST-SOCIALIST ACADEMIC CZECH DISCOURSE
Simona Fojtová, Transylvania University

COLOR (I) KUAER: RESTORIED AND RECLAIMED THE SELVES
Khôi D. Nguyen, Bridgeport, CT

The paper presentation will use Asian Pacific Islander Queer American theorist Kevin Kumashiro's concept of "restorying" to create new autobiographical agency for Queer Others. "Restorying" is a concept developed by Kumashiro that names the process of rewriting autobiographies as a form of activism. This presentation will require its audience to listen in an activist way. In resisting hegemonies, the audience will unlearn Euroamerican traditions of knowledge and relearn personal narrative ways of telling stories, which will allow the restorying and reclaiming of the self.

WOMEN IN HEALTH AND KINESIOLOGY ACADEMIA: MANEUVERING THROUGH PAST AND PRESENT HEGEMONIC WATERS
*Melanie Sartore (East Carolina University)
George B. Cunningham (Texas A&M University)

The institution of sport is often identified as rich in patriarchal traditions of heterosexual masculinity and male hegemony. Such ideals set precedent for men and women to adhere to traditional gender roles and within acceptable gender boundaries. For males, these boundaries are enforced through dominant forms of masculine hegemony. Likewise, hegemonic femininity maintains the narrowly-defined, suitable behaviors and images of women. The purpose of this investigation is to assess how women occupying faculty positions in health and kinesiology departments, a population overlooked thus far in the literature, have and do maneuver through the hegemonic waters of their past and present.

298. ROUNDTABLE
NOTES TOWARD FEMINIST UNDERSTANDINGS OF AGGRESSION
NORTH: 206
In feminist theory, little has been done to create theories of aggression which focus primarily on the aggressors themselves. What theorizing has been done mainly relies on simplistic and reductionist theories of patriarchy. This not only oversimplifies the sources of and causes for male aggression, but also renders female aggression invisible. Our roundtable discussion will seek to complicate and extend the existing knowledge base around aggression in an effort to effect change.

TAKING ACTION: CONNECTING ACROSS STATE, INSTITUTION, AND GENERATIONAL BOUNDARIES

The National Women's Studies Association Journal plays a critical role in shaping the fields of women's and gender studies, in that it puts forth cutting edge feminist scholarship, activism, and creative material. Special issues of this journal are a key part of the process: they highlight crucial feminist issues and create a space for dialogue, reflection and new ideas. This panel brings together an editor of the NWSAJ and four guest editors to provide the audience with strategies for writing effective "special issue" proposals and evaluating, organizing, and selecting manuscripts and creative submissions that enhance feminist understanding and research.

REFLECTIONS ON EDITING A SPECIAL ISSUE OF THE NATIONAL WOMEN'S STUDIES ASSOCIATION JOURNAL: PROCESSES AND PERSPECTIVES

NORTH: 207

This panel explores the challenges, successes, opportunities and revelations of various interdisciplinary collaborations between women's studies, sociology, anthropology, English, and humanities courses at a university and community college in two states. Using concepts of activism, advocacy and feminist mentoring and scholarship, participants connect students via email/Internet projects, and connect with each other to share pedagogical ideas and build on cultural and community needs. Focusing on student projects and activities, this presentation contextualizes the activist aspects of women's studies within student learning, professional development, and creating change, both within ourselves and our communities.

MEDITATED GIRLHOOD: FEMINIST LENSES ON GLOBAL GIRLHOOD

NORTH: 212

This panel investigates global perspectives on girlhood through a variety of contexts and lenses. As feminists we recognize that media contributes to the construction of female identity, and that these constructs have significant and lasting effects. If we are to change oppressive media practices that ultimately impact future generations we need to understand how body concepts are created and communicated to adolescent girls. This panel investigates ways in which body image is created and reinforced through media and legislation. This panel provides insight into global perspectives of girlhood and recognizes that young identities are seriously influenced through mediated texts.

RE-WRITING EMPIRE: GENDERED CHALLENGES TO OLD HEGEMONIES

SOUTH: 231

We examine new and contradictory manifestations of nationalist impulses. Drawing on a textual analysis of law and popular culture, we explore the ways in which marginalized bodies and spaces challenge nationalist scripts. Among the questions we engage are: What are ways in which local feminisms and patriarchies explode into problematic definitions of "modernity" for women in the South? What are the new and flexible modes of feminist organizing that challenge the new technologies of imperialist and nationalist writings? What new alliances are required as women in the South press against violence, as a form of patriarchal writing on the body?

RESISTING NORMATIVE AND EXCLUSIONARY HEGEMONIES IN THE LGBTQ MOVEMENT
SOUTH: 237

This roundtable explores the failure of some aspects of the LGBTQ movement to resist dominant hegemonies, which in some cases has resulted in the installation of queer hegemonies or homonormatives. Our speakers will address topics including welfare politics and the LGBTQ movement, the controversies surrounding the Human Rights Campaign's exclusionary homonormativity, "sex positive" as form of resistance, LGBTQ politics and controversies in Cincinnati, the effect of the heteronormativity on youth, a critique of heteronormativity in Jennifer Baumgardner's Look Both Ways: Bisexual Politics, and an exploration of the complexities of the marriage rights focus of the LGBTQ movement for anti-marriage individuals.

STRATEGIES OF TRANSEXUAL AND TRANSGENDER IDENTITY: A CROSS-DISCIPLINARY CONVERSATION
SOUTH: 238

This panel examines transgender and transsexual identity deployments in philosophical, literary, and legal contexts. Focusing on the intervention of trans-identities into hegemonic gender discourse conceals that these identities are strategically forged as a matter of life and survival. By examining presentations of identity in specific moments, this cross-disciplinary panel hopes to shift the focus from debating the subversiveness and political potential of identities to recognizing the strategic nature of identity in context.

GENDER, FEMINISM, AND THE POST-9/11 STATE
NORTH: 210
Feminists have long acknowledged the necessity of grappling with the State to support and advance their aims. Institutions of the State have been critiqued and reformed by feminist and other activists who seek to make the State serve more equitable and just ends. At the same time, the voices and agenda of activists are always being appropriated by State logics of imperialism, racism and sexism. In our panel, we will discuss the gendered and racializing paradigms and rhetoric particular to the post-9/11 climate that States employ in the realms of incarceration, health/science, and organized religion.

SAILING STORMY WATERS: ADVICE FOR NAVIGATING THE ACADEMIC JOB MARKET
NORTH: 212
For newly-minted and soon-to-be graduating Women's Studies doctoral students, the prospect of entering the academic job market can seem daunting. While graduate students in Women's Studies face many of the same concerns as students in other fields, the nascentness of this (inter)discipline provides a unique set of opportunities and challenges that job seekers must address. This panel offers practical advice from experienced faculty members on navigating the different stages of the academic job search, including representing oneself persuasively in application materials, using successful interviewing strategies, and negotiating effectively for an academic position. SOUTH: 233

Each member of our panel, three presenters and a moderator, faces the same critical problem when teaching women's studies courses: we must simultaneously explain the rich intellectual traditions and activist roots of women's studies without relying on binary categories to do so. In this panel we offer concrete queering techniques from a variety of disciplines—English, sociology, theatre, film, and women's studies—to help students both understand binary categories and challenge them as a way to demonstrate women's studies as a discipline that teaches oppression, resistance, and new forms of knowledge-making.

DISPARATE IDENTITIES, DISPARATE POWERS: INEQUITIES AT THE FRONT LINES OF THE GENDER BASED VIOLENCE MOVEMENT
SOUTH: 238

The gender based violence movement brings together advocates, activists, medical professionals, law enforcement, legal experts, and others as front line workers responding to the needs of victims and their families. Gender based organizations are adapting and changing to the political economic structures of an increasingly professional service sector. Thus, gender based violence organizations are sites where front line workers confront their own identities according to race, ethnicity, class, education status, and sexuality. This panel presents case studies from Aotearoa, Peru, and the United States to examine the disparate identities between gender based violence workers and their constituents.

NWSA Conference 2008
WOMEN WRITING FOR (A) CHANGE READ-AROUND FOR CREATIVE WRITERS
NORTH: 205

Women Writing for (a) Change, a unique, local feminist organization founded by poet and teacher Mary Pierce Brosmer in 1991, is one of the community groups assisting local planners of the 2008 NWSA Conference in Cincinnati. WWfaC has offered writing classes, retreats, and workshops for women and girls for more than a decade, using their unique process of group feedback and mutual support.

As part of our conference's community outreach program, we propose to add a 60-minute creative writing read-around, in effect a workshop, using the WWfaC process and conducted by their facilitators. The read-around would be open to anyone who wishes to read their own poetry or prose. Participants in the session listening to the readers will be asked to jot down words, phrases, or sentences that they hear that resonate with them, or stand out to them.

The facilitator will invite listeners to "read back" the lines they have written down, and then open the session for questions and discussion. This practice honors the words of the writers and lifts up the voices of the women gathered in the session. We believe the demonstration of this process by WWfaC provides an excellent example of both local feminist education and community outreach, and therefore should be included in the NWSA conference program.

YOUR NEGRO TOUR GUIDE
BY KATHY WILSON

Your Negro Tour Guide is a mash-up of rants, nightmares, open letters and quasi-word associations spotlighting the funk of -isms America tries burying alongside the pathologies America assumes belong solely to blacks.

Starring a black woman who does and does not/can and cannot speak for monolithic blackness, it is a multimedia monologue in bursts using slides, music cues and "Hello, My Name is " tags ripped off revealing with each yank the minutiae of The Big Three: race, gender and class. Until the end when she's not Your Negro Tour Guide after all.
This session will offer practical advice about how to get published in women's studies, from women's studies journals to books and edited collections. Get tips on selecting chapters for journal publication versus developing a full academic book proposal. Understand how the journal submission process and timeline works, and gain insight into interpreting reviewer reports. Learn the best strategies for identifying a press, approaching an editor, developing a proposal, and understanding the publishing market.

SESSION LEADERS:

Rebecca Ropers-Huilman, NWSA Journal Editor

Dr. Ropers-Huilman is the Editor of NWSA Journal. She is Professor of higher education at the University of Minnesota, appointed 2007. Prior to this she was a faculty member in the Department of Educational Theory, Policy, & Practice at Louisiana State University, director of Women's & Gender Studies, director of the Women's Center, and coordinator of the higher education program. She has grounded her teaching in her research which is based on the fundamental principles of feminist pedagogy.

SUNDAY 10:00PM - 12:30PM: CRITICAL ISSUES SESSIONS

PROMOTING RACIAL DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION
SESSION FORMAT: WORKSHOP
NORTH: 202

This session will examine programs and initiatives to promote racial diversity in organizations, curricula, and staffing, among others. Session leaders will discuss efforts underway as they relate to curriculum development, a National Council for Research on Women project titled “Diversifying the Leadership of Women's Research, Policy & Advocacy Centers,” and NWSA anti-racism projects. Diversifying the Leadership of Women’s Research, Policy, and Advocacy Centers is a Ford Foundation-funded project aimed at promoting the leadership of women of color from historically underrepresented groups in the United States within NCRW and its affiliated research, policy and advocacy member centers.

SESSION LEADERS
Pat Washington, NWSA Women of Color Caucus Co-Chair

Since moving to San Diego in 1996, Washington has held a number of organizational leadership positions and participated in a broad range of activities, including serving as the Education Chair for the San Diego Branch NAACP, Executive Committee member and Section Director of the California State Conference of the NAACP, Chair of the Lambda Letters Project, Vice Chair of the Intergroup Relations Project of the San Diego Foundation, and Secretary to the National Women's Studies Association.

She is currently President of the San Diego Democratic Women's Club, 78th Assembly District delegate to the San Diego County Democratic Central Committee, Co-Chair of Democratic Unity Coalition South (DUCS), Member of the State Democratic Committee, GO Team Precinct Leader, 3rd Vice President of the San Diego Branch NAACP, Co-Chair of We Advocate Gender Equity (WAGE), Vice President and Chair of Search & Selection for Filipino American Community Empowerment, and co-chair of the Women of Color Caucus of the National Women's Studies Association.

Dr. Washington worked in voter outreach and voter registration efforts for the San Diego “No on 54” Campaign, and she also worked with We the People Democratic Club, San Diego Democratic Club, the San Diego Branch NAACP and other organizations to increase voter registration and voter turnout for elections. A member of the San Diego Democratic Central Committee GO Team for voter outreach and mobilization, Washington recognizes the importance of a vibrant, engaged voting populace.

Dr. Washington is a member of the San Diego Democratic Club and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Democratic Club. She served as a delegate to the State Democratic Conventions in 2004, 2005 and 2008, and she also served as a delegate to the 2004 Democratic National Convention.

Aimee Carrillo Rowe, NWSA Women of Color Caucus Co-Chair

Aimee Carrillo Rowe is an Associate Professor of Rhetoric and POROI at The University of Iowa. Her teaching and writing address the politics of representation and feminist alliances, third world feminism, and whiteness and antiracism. Her book manuscript, Power Lines: On the Subject of Feminist Alliances (Duke University Press, 2008), offers a coalesional theory of subjectivity as a bridge to difference-based alliances. Her writing appears primarily in interdisciplinary outlets such as Hypatia (Summer 2007), Radical History Review (Summer 2004), and NWSA Journal (Summer 2005).

Yamuna Sangarasivam, Anthropology Dept., Nazareth College (Rochester, NY)

Dr. Sangarasivam’s research interests include nationalism and terrorism; race relations intersecting with constructions of class, gender, sexuality and national identity; transnational/border identities; peace-witnessing and social justice. Some of her relevant publications include “Militarizing the Feminine Body: Women's Participation in the Tamil Nationalist Struggle” in Violence and the Body: Race, Gender and the State (2003) and “Researcher as Informant: Methodological Pleasures of the Native Other,” Geographical Review 91: 1&2 (2001).
Delores Walters, Director of Research for Institutional Diversity, National Council for Research on Women

Delores M. Walters, PhD, Director of Research for Institutional Diversity, is a cultural anthropologist and educator with an extensive record of community-based teaching and research. She recently held a joint position with the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center in Cincinnati, Ohio and Northern Kentucky University.

As a community research specialist, she conducted workshops and courses aimed at restoring the history of people of color, particularly of African American women, to the public memory. She helped introduce the new opera, "Margaret Garner," to the public for both the Cincinnati Opera and the New York City Opera. She is currently co-editing a collection of symposium papers called "Gendered Resistance" focusing on both contemporary and historic slavery.

Our session approaches queer pedagogy from the assumption that it represents an intersection between queer theory and critical pedagogy. At the same time, we are leery of certain strands of queer scholarship which seem to position queer pedagogy as a kind of afterthought to academically-hip queer theory.

As William Spurlin reminds us, “teaching does matter as a form of queer inquiry and social intervention to the extent that it remains dedicated to deeper understandings of cultural literacy, resistance to discursive and intellectual colonization in a (hetero)normative academy and social order, credible social change, and more democratic spheres of classroom and public deliberation” (15).

Building on this belief, we examine the issue of feminist collaboration from a queer theoretical perspective. Focusing particularly on our collaboration as authors of Finding Out: LGBT history, politics, and culture (to be published by SAGE Press in 2008), we describe our collaborative process and theorize about the dynamics of that process. We also relate the issues of collaboration and the producing of textbooks to a discussion of queer pedagogy, including their perceived positioning in the academic hierarchy.

SESSION LEADERS

Deborah Meem, Dept. of Women's Studies, University of Cincinnati

Deb Meem specializes in Victorian literature, lesbian studies, and 19th C. novels by women. She graduated from Wellesley College in 1971 with a double major in English and music, then after a decade away from the academy returned to graduate school in English at SUNY-Stony Brook, where she earned a Ph.D. in 1985. Her work has appeared in Journal of the History of Sexuality, Feminist Teacher, Studies in Popular Culture and elsewhere. Her edition of the 1880 novel The Rebel of the Family by Eliza Lynn Linton was published in 2002 by Broadview Press. With Michelle Gibson she has co-edited Femme/Butch: New Considerations of the Way We Want To Go (2002) and Lesbian Academic Couples (2005), both published by Haworth Press. In late 2008 her book Finding Out: An Introduction to LGBT Studies (co-authored with Michelle Gibson and Jonathan Alexander) will be published by Sage Press, and in 2009 Valancourt Press will publish her edition of Realities (1851) by Linton. Deb teaches literature in the English Department and Sexuality Studies in the Women's Studies Department. She also co-chairs the LGBT faculty/staff Task Force at UC.

Jonathan Alexander, Director of Distance Learning, University of California-Irvine

Jonathan Alexander is twice the recipient of the Ellen Nold Award for Best Articles in the field of Computers and Composition Studies. His books have been nominated for various awards, including the Lambda Literary Award. Jonathan also works on several editorial boards and has been named as one of the founding editorial board members for Computers and Composition Digital Press.

Jonathan's work focuses primarily on the use of emerging communications technologies in the teaching of writing and in shifting conceptions of what writing, composing, and authoring mean. Jonathan also works at the intersection of the fields of writing studies and sexuality studies, where he explores what discursive theories of sexuality have to teach us about literacy and literate practice in pluralistic democracies. His recent publications include: Finding Out: An Introduction to LGBT Studies. With Deborah T. Meem and Michelle Gibson. (Sage Publications. December 2008) and Literacy, Sexuality, Pedagogy: Theory and Practice for Composition Studies. (Utah State University Press. April 2008).

Michelle Gibson, Dept. of Women's Studies, University of Cincinnati

Michelle Gibson is the Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Department of Women's Studies. She received her Ph.D. from Ohio University, where her areas of study were American Literature, Composition Research, and Pedagogy, and Creative Writing. Her scholarship has continued in all three of these areas. Much of her work applies queer and postmodern identity theories to pedagogical practice and popular culture. She also continues to write and publish poetry. With Jonathan Alexander, she edits QP: Queer Poetry, an online poetry journal, and she and Alexander also edited a strain of JAC: Journal of Advanced Composition entitled...
“Queer Composition(s)”. She co-edited (with Deborah Meem) Femme/Butch: New Considerations of the Way We Want to Go and Lesbian Academic Couples. With Meem and Alexander she is writing Finding Out, an introductory textbook for use in introductory LGBT courses.

REGIONALIZING WOMEN'S STUDIES
SESSION FORMAT: SEMINAR
NORTH: 204

Through the lens of a faculty and student exchange and book project that focuses on women's human rights, citizenships and identities in a North American context among women's and gender studies programs in Mexico, Canada, and the US, this session will engage participants in the question of the meanings, prospects, and problematics for regionalizing women's studies in response to regionalizing economic, political, and social forces (forming such entities as NAFTA, the European Union, etc) as part of globalization and in the spirit of feminisms, if not without then beyond, borders to counter negative forms of un- and re-borderings that undermine social justice.

SESSION LEADERS
Anne Sisson Runyan, Dept. of Women's Studies, University of Cincinnati

Anne Sisson Runyan holds a PhD in International Relations from American University in Washington, D.C. She previously founded and directed Women's Studies programs at the State University of New York at Potsdam and Wright State University where she also held appointments in Political Science, and has taught in Canada and Europe as well as studied and guest lectured in many parts of the U.S. and the world. She is the co-author of Global Gender Issues, the co-editor of Gender and Global Restructuring, has published widely in the field of feminist world politics, and is working on a book on global feminist theory. At UC, she teaches such core and elective graduate courses as Feminist Theory: Global, MA Research, and Gender and Globalization as well as serving as an advisor on MA Committees and for independent studies, especially in the area of global feminisms. As director, she is responsible for the overall coordination and development of the Center, its relationship and activities with the Friends of Women's Studies, and its role in the life of the university and the field of Women's Studies.

Marianne Marchand, Dept. of Political Science and History, Universidad de las Americas-Puebla, Mexico

Marianne H. Marchand is professor of international relations at the Universidad de las Américas, Puebla, Mexico, where she also coordinates the Ph.D. program in International Relations. She is a member of the National System of Researchers (SNI). Her research demonstrates a great concern with the politics of change and (global) restructuring. In her work, Marchand looks to feminist and postcolonial theory and engages in critical explorations of the narratives and practices of development, globalization and regionalization/regionalism.

She addresses the politics of change and how global restructuring often leads to increased marginalization and social exclusion. These concerns are reflected in some of her books: Feminism/Postmodernism/Development (with Jane L. Parpart; Routledge, 1995); and Gender and Global Restructuring (with Anne Sisson Runyan; Routledge, 2000). In addition, Dr. Marchand has been the co-editor of the “Ripe Series” in Global Political Economy (Routledge) and is currently the co-editor of the “Gender in a Global/Local World” series with Ashgate.

In 2003 she finished the national report to the Dutch parliament on the implementation of the UN Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW). In addition, Marianne Marchand recently received funding from the European Union to coordinate the REDESFRO Network on Regionalism, Social Development and Borders. Finally, she is currently coordinating a research project on Migration and Socially Sustainable Development in two communities in Tlaxcala (Mexico) which has culminated in various publications, including Tlaxcala: ¿Migración o Desarrollo Local? (2006). From 2007 to 2008 she is vice-president of the International Studies Association.
Katherine Side is Associate Professor, Department of Women's Studies at Mount Saint Vincent University and Adjunct Professor, Irish Studies Program, Saint Mary's University, Halifax, Nova Scotia. In 2004, she was the Margaret Laurence Scholar in Residence in Gender and Women's Studies at Brandon University, Brandon, Manitoba.

Her research is in the area of gender and voluntary community contributions, rural sustainability and 'disciplining' Women's Studies. Currently she holds a Standard Research Grant, Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada, Maintaining Lives on the Margin: Gender, Change and Rural Community Sustainability. Her research has been funded by the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada, Canadian Institutes for Health Research, the Canada-Ireland University Foundation and the Canadian Research Institute for the Advancement of Women.

The Veiled Monologues
Tom Sellar, editor

This issue features the first English translation of Adelheid Roosen’s sensational play The Veiled Monologues. The play, based on Roosen’s interviews with hundreds of Muslim women from around the world who emigrated to the Netherlands, powerfully reveals the challenges they experience as they reckon with issues of intimacy, sexuality, and love.

Read the introduction for free at theater.dukejournals.org/content/vol37/issue2.

Truth Commissions: State Terror, History, and Memory
a special issue of Radical History Review (number 97)
Greg Grandin and Thomas Miller Klubock, special issue editors

The essays in this special issue examine the role of history in truth commissions organized to investigate political violence, state terror, and human rights violations around the globe and consider the different kinds of history produced by commissions.

Read the introduction for free at rhr.dukejournals.org/content/vol2007/issue97.

The New Women’s Labor History
a special issue of Labor (volume 3, number 3)
Eileen Boris, special issue editor; Leon Fink, Julie Greene, Joan Sangster, and Mercedes Steedman, special issue coeditors

Offering the latest scholarship in the field of women’s labor history, this special issue suggests new directions for labor history—ones that address the study of gendered bodies at the intersection of the politics of class, race, and citizenship.

Read the introduction for free at labor.dukejournals.org/content/vol3/issue3.

THIS IS WHAT A FEMINIST LOOKS LIKE

Spark Classroom Discussions • • •

Ms. in your classroom helps keep students up-to-date with the current women’s movement and its issues, and sparks continuing interest.

As you prepare your curriculum, we’ve created new ways to use Ms.

Ms. magazine has a unique place in your classroom. It applies a class, race, and gender lens to its global and national coverage. Students will gain a feminist perspective on every current topic—public policy, environment, arts and culture, law, health, economics and more. Ms. also promotes the work of feminist scholars, bringing their research into the public dialogue.

White Weddings
Romancing Heterosexuality in Popular Culture
Chrys Ingraham
This classic book in the social sciences shows the pervasive influence of weddings in our culture and the important role they play in maintaining the romance of heterosexuality, the myth of white supremacy and the insatiable appetite of consumer capitalism.
January 2008: 208 pp
Pb: 978-0-415-96133-3: $29.95

Men Speak Out
Views on Gender, Sex, and Power
Shira Tarrant
Men Speak Out is a collection of essays written by and about pro-feminist men. In the essays, which feature original, lively and accessible prose, anti-sexist men make sense of their gendered experiences in today's culture.
December 2007: 320 pp
Pb: 978-0-415-95657-4: $35.95

Gender and Everyday Life
Mary Holmes
Women and men are more alike than we might think. Mary Holmes explains how sociological approaches to gender can help us understand how and why everyday life is often so different for women and men, despite their similarities.
December 2007: 320 pp
Pb: 978-0-415-95657-4: $35.95

The Caveman Mystique
Pop-Darwinism and the Debates Over Sex, Violence, and Science
Martha McCaughey
This book tells the story of evolutionary theory's influence on popular ideas of masculinity, addressing sexual competition, scientific and psychological explanations of homosexuality, rape, and the establishment of gender binaries in popular culture.
October 2007: 176 pp
Pb: 978-0-415-93475-6: $25.95

Food and Culture
A Reader
2nd Edition
Carole Counihan and Penny Van Esterik
Food and Culture takes a global look at the social, symbolic, and political-economic role of food. This classic text, updated for the first time in a decade, is hailed as the bible in the field. A "must use" for any course on the anthropology or sociology of food.
December 2007: 624 pp

Women, Science, and Technology
A Reader in Feminist Science Studies
Mary Wyr, Mary Barbercheck, Donna Giesman Cookmeyer, Hatice Ozurtak and Marta Wayne
Women, Science, and Technology is an ideal reader for courses in feminist science studies and women's studies. This second edition fully updates its predecessor, with new readings that extend content coverage into areas not originally included, such as reproductive, agricultural, medical and imaging technologies.
May 2008: 400 pp
Pb: 978-0-415-96040-3: $49.95

Violent Femmes
Women as Spies in Popular Culture
Rosie White
The female spy has long exerted a strong grip on the popular imagination. This study proposes that the figure of the female spy constitutes a nexus of contradictory ideas about femininity, power, and sexuality in popular culture.

Reconstructing Motherhood and Disability in the Age of "Perfect" Babies
Gail Heidi Landsman
This ethnography by a noted anthropologist is a book about transformation, about the meanings mothers of "imperfect" children give to motherhood and disability in an age in which infants are commodified and technology seems to hold out the promise of "perfect" babies. An ideal short book for teaching courses in anthropology, sociology, disability studies and women's studies.

Arizona State University is located in a unique Southwest region with a complex and culturally diverse history and has a vision to be a New American University, promoting excellence in its research and among its students, faculty and staff, increasing access to its educational resources and working with communities to positively impact social and economic development.

The Women and Gender Studies Program at Arizona State University is one of the most vibrant in the U.S. Our PhD in Gender Studies curriculum is designed to provide interdisciplinary training in theory and methods with three concentrations: Justice, Social Change and Sustainability; Health Science and Technology; and Visual and Narrative Culture.

The WGS community is intellectually and culturally diverse with expertise in mapping the intersections of gender with race, class, sexuality and nation. Students work with twelve core faculty and more than 60 faculty affiliates from other programs in the university. For more information: http://wgs.asu.edu/. Application deadline: January 15th.

Women, Gender & the West

THIS TWO-VOLUME SURVEY of the history of women and gender in western civilization makes cutting-edge scholarship accessible to a wide audience. While devoting attention to women of all classes, religions, and ethnicities, the text examines political, economic, intellectual, and social history through the lens of gender.

Five major themes run through the narrative: the relationship between key historical events or ideas and women's lives, the history of the family and sexuality, the social construction of gender, cultural assumptions about women (versus their actual lives), and self-perception and women's place in western societies. A rich collection of primary sources and biographies reinforces these themes.

“Demolishes the stereotype of the Native American women as shy or passive”

CALL FOR PAPERS:
SPECIAL ISSUE OF NWSA JOURNAL: LATINA SEXUALITIES
GUEST EDITORS: LOURDES TORRES (DEPAUL UNIVERSITY) AND LORENA GARCIA (UIC)

The NWSA Journal invites proposals from scholars/activists around the topic of Latina sexualities. This special issue will focus attention on how the relationship between race, ethnicity, sexuality, and power has, and continues to shape Latina sexualities in the U.S. It intends to highlight debates, ideas, and practices relating to the meanings assigned to Latina bodies in the U.S., how Latinas experience their socially regulated bodies, and how those bodies are framed with regard to issues of knowledge, truth, politics, and history.

Articles that critically examine the state of empirically grounded, historicized, and theoretically informed research around Latina bodies and sexualities are especially welcome. Particularly interesting will be analyses that highlight how interventions in Latina sexualities have made an impact on the fields of Latina/o studies; women’s and gender studies; sexuality studies; lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, and queer studies; as well as mainstream disciplines like literature, sociology, history, public health, psychology, art history, public policy, etc.

Articles are invited from the perspectives of activists, artists, independent scholars, faculty, and health practitioners from a broad range of disciplines and fields, that address issues of sexual desire, danger and pleasure, cultural activism, creating and performing sexual identities, human rights and social justice, and citizenship, among other topics.

POSSIBLE TOPICS INCLUDE:

- (Im)Migration, Diaspora and Transnationalism and Latina Sexualities
- Globalization of Latina Sexualities
- Construction and Impact of Latina Sexualities through HIV and AIDS
- Health and Latina Sexualities
- Sex Work and Sex Tourism
- Sexualized Latina Identities
- Diversification of Latina sexualities
- Latina Sexualities in Literature, Film, and Music
- Latina Sexual Politics
- Intersections of Latinidad, Sexuality and Spirituality
- Making and Un/Making of Erotic Latina/o Bodies
- Psychoanalytical Approaches to Latina/o Sexualities
- Queer Latina Feminisms
- Latina Sexualities and Reproductive Rights
- Sexual Rights, Civil Rights and Citizenship
- Visual Cultures and Latina Sexualities
- Representations, Pornography and Mass Media Communication of Latina Sexualities

Submission: Abstracts of 500 words or less are due June 30th, 2008. E-mail your abstract to ltorres@depaul.edu or lorena@uic.edu.
