Hi, everyone! I'm Beth Colvin, editor of the Forum. I'm glad you're all here.

In the ancient world, the forum was where everything happened. Where ideas were exchanged and debated, where news broke, where people heard the latest. I look forward to that happening in this community. I want to hear what you think of the magazine, of the themes and topics we tackle. Let me know about your latest research or this thing you just read. Together, I hope we can make this community a

3. Initiate @mentions by typing "@" and the name of the member you want to mention in your post. As you start typing, you'll see a list of suggested members to choose from.

Hint: If the list of members is too long to scroll through, type the member's first and last name with a space between them and the name will appear. For example, if you were searching for me, type '@Jamie Chapman' and my name and photo will appear first in the list.

4. Select the name of the member you'd like to mention from the list by clicking their name. The mention will become a hyperlink to the member's community profile and the member you mentioned will receive a real-time email notification alerting them that they've been mentioned.
